Mr. Young on Banks.
The Prince Might Worry.
A Rampaging Lady.
Pope Pius to Broadcast.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT to American business, especially to the little man who would like to know that his savings are safe and not used by grafters in their speculations, is a suggestion by Owen D. Young. He would establish government control of commercial banks, for their regulation and the public's protection.

Mr. Young points out that this country has had 6,000 bank failures in the past 10 years.

He did not say so but everybody knows that dishonesty is back of many such failures. Mr. Young says truly:

"It is a great reflection on the American people that they cannot get a banking system which will prevent such tragedies as we have witnessed."

THE PRINCE OF WALES and his brother today flew over the Panama Canal. Perhaps they observed, with anxiety, that we haven't done anything much to protect the canal from destructive airplane attack.

That is important to them, since there is little doubt of continued peace between this nation and the British Empire, and the British use the canal that we built as freely as we do, and for the same fees.

MR. KEATON, called "Buster," now shares Kipling's opinion of female violence. He shows scratches, bruises and a wrecked studio. Two studio policemen were needed to overpower the young lady in the case.

The lady weighs 139 pounds, and Buster Keaton told her she was "getting too fat." That's the last that he remembers distinctly, although there was something about a $500 bet, which the lady collected.

Mr. Keaton says the screams of the lady who asked him for $20,000 more were terrific, as the police carried her away.

Nobody knows what terrific force is locked up in calm, placid womanhood. It's like the smooth waters over Niagara's edge.

NEXT THURSDAY, February 12, Pope Pius XI will broadcast for the first time, heard all over the earth.

It would be difficult to overestimate the possibilities of increased influence that regular broadcasting by the Pope might establish.

His advisers, doubtless, will remind him that his first talk to the world will take place on Lincoln's birthday, an excellent opportunity to say something to interest all Americans, regardless of religion.

OTHER CITIES will read with a gasp that projects for public improvements which New York now has in hand will cost more than two thousand million dollars.

Mr. Berry, comptroller, delights the hearts of capitalists, announcing the sale this year of $282,130,000 of city bonds. On their income Uncle Sam collects no income tax.

STALIN, OF RUSSIA, who ought to know, does not agree with American financiers who predict disastrous failure for Russia's "five-year plan."

He says the plan will be completed, certainly inside of four years, perhaps in three.

Men looking for jobs here will be amazed to hear that Russia is urging workers from the outside, skilled men especially, to come and take Russian jobs.

Some have accepted the invitation.

How do you supposed Russia manages to escape the unemployment disease?

EVIDENTLY a remarkable executive, Stalin does not shine in theorizing about outside races.

He expects all the workers of the world, including our own, to point to Russia, saying:

"There is our government, our fatherland. Let us support them, against the capitalists, in bringing about the world revolution."

Stalin does not know American brakemen, carpenters, engineers, plumbers, etc. They have other plans, and Karl Marx's whiskers alone would "put them off" before they had begun to study his theories.

Long before American workers join Russia's government, somebody of the Napoleon or Genghis Khan type will probably come along and take charge of Russia.

That always has happened, in revolutions.

CHAIRMAN LEGGE, of the Farm Board, predicts wheat shortage, which may be serious. The carry-over last year was only 40 per cent of normal. Drought is widespread throughout the country, not enough snow and sub-soil moisture. It would be interesting if Uncle Sam should make a profit on his corner in wheat, after all.

HIGH BIDDERS FAVORED BY PURCHASER, CHARGE

Pittsburgh Concern Asserts 'Powerful Influences' Are Behind Phila. Competitor

Controller James P. Kerr today said he would investigate promptly charges that the City Department of Supplies awarded contracts for canned goods to the highest bidders, a Philadelphia firm, ignoring Pittsburgh merchants, and that extravagance of that department was costing the taxpayers thousands of dollars.

The charges were contained in a letter to Council late yesterday by John D. Houston, of the James W. Houston Company, Pittsburgh wholesale grocers.

Houston charges that Director Bertram L. Succop, of the Department of Supplies, sent out sheets setting forth the articles desired and that "Parke or equal" was specified, virtually demanding that Pittsburgh wholesalers consult their Philadelphia rival in submitting bids.

The Philadelphia firm, the L. H. Parke Company, according to Houston, was supported by "powerful influences."

Mayor Charles H. Kline conferred today separately with Director Succop and John S. Herron, president of council, presumably with reference to the Houston charges. A statement from the Mayor was expected late today. The others had nothing to say.

HIGHEST BIDDERS

According to Houston, the January awards were given to the Parke company, highest bidders on every item, he said. The following list was given as a basis of comparison for the month:

Sliced pineapple, awarded to Parke at $9.71 per dozen, low bid $8.80; apple butter, $7.35, low bid, $5.10; puree, $5.60, low bid, $2.75; kidney beans, $6.65, low bid, $4.75; prunes, $6.60, low bid, $5.85; crushed pineapple, $9.60, low bid, $8.90; red pitted cherries, $10.95, low bid, $9.50; table peaches, $7.65, low bid, $6.35; bartlett pears, $9.20, low bid, $6.25; sweet peas, $7.65, low bid, $5.35; green beans, $7.65, low bid, $5; plums, $7.65, low bid, $5.40; mixed vegetables, $6.65, low bid, $5.45; extra stewed tomatoes, $4.76, low bid,

PARIS, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Friends of Marilyn Miller, American musical comedy and screen star, today were wondering whether to take seriously Miss Miller's announcement that she was going to marry Fred Astaire, dancer, with whom she co-starred in Florenz Zeigfeld's "Smiles."

He is now visiting in London. Miss Miller is convalescing here from an attack of grip.

BREAKS RECORD, FOILS DEATH

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 6.—(Universal.)—Older of the world's automobile speed record, Capt. Malcolm Campbell announced today that he will not attempt at present to better the 246 miles per hour he made over the beach speedway.

The average speed the British auto ace made yesterday was 245.730 miles an hour. The former record of 231.38 miles an hour was set in 1929 by the late Sir Henry Segrave, of England.

Capt. Campbell made two runs, one in a southerly direction, the other north. He was timed over a measured mile each way and the average for the two miles calculated.

MILE IN 15 SECONDS

The British racer made his best time going south, speeding at the rate of 246.575 miles an hour. Going the other way he made 244.897 miles an hour. The time

396 Motor Deaths Here In Year Set Record

A new high record for automobile deaths in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County was made last year, statistics of fatal accidents, compiled by Coroner W. J. McGregor, disclosed today. The mortality report also shows a sharp increase in the number of murders.

During 1930 there were 396 fatal traffic accidents, involving 372 automobiles. This is an increase of 48 deaths over the previous record in 1929. In 1921 there were only 194 automobile fatalities. There were 34 less children killed by machines last year, however, than in 1929.

A definite and substantial decrease among industrial group accidents is shown by the audit. The increase in traffic accidents is due to reckless driving after the midnight hour, and disregard by pedestrians of the use of intersections, according to the coroner.

There were 99 murders in the county last year, an increase of 28 from the year preceding. Other statistics include the following:

Persons drowned, 83, last year, 70; persons hurt by falls, 216, last year 191; deaths by carbon monoxide and poisons, 63; suicides, 194, a decrease of 3; deaths from alcoholism, 101, decrease of 17. Total number of deaths investigated 3,266, of which 1,220 were accidental.

Naturalized U. S. Citizen Confesses on Arrest in Rome; Explosives Seized

Rome, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Michele Schirru, arrested Tuesday night for possession of firearms and explosives, confessed today, police said, that he had planned an attempt on the life of Premier Mussolini. Police said he used an American passport and is a naturalized citizen of the United States.

He had brought two high explosive bombs here for that purpose, police said he had told them. Schirru was arrested after a gunfight with police who said he drew a revolver while he was being searched at the police station, wounded three policemen and attempted suicide, inflicting a serious wound in his head.

In the rooms which he occupied at two hotels police said they found two bombs so constructed as to be used either as time bombs or percussion bombs.

In his alleged confession Schirru was reported to have said he had been an anarchist for years, but began thinking of plans to assassinate Mussolini last summer while he was in Paris, and came to Rome resolved to kill the Premier.

He is recovering from his self-inflicted wound, and will be tried by a special tribunal under the defense of the state act, which provides a death penalty for the crimes of which he is accused.

MINOR PENALTY FACES BUTLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler will be court-martialed on a charge of "conduct to prejudice good order and military discipline," it was learned today.

Although it carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison, it was made plain that no one at the Navy Department expects he will go to jail as a result of his speech in which he criticized Premier Mussolini, of Italy, as a "hit-and-run" driver.

The general opinion in Navy circles is that Buler, if found guilty at all, will receive a minor penalty, such as a reprimand.

The general was indignant over stories at home of immorality among the soldiers. These he vigorously denied.

Employment, Not Dole, Should Be America's Program for Needy

THE SENATORS who are advocating direct distribution of funds to those who are suffering from financial depression or drought disaster are, of course, animated by the best motives, but are taking an un-American method and a most dangerous and demoralizing method of relieving distress.

Nothing that approaches the European dole should ever be inaugurated in this free country.

The last thing an American government should do is make dependents of independent American citizens.

Distress should be relieved by employment and not by donations.

In fact, the proper policy of the government at this time could be summarized in a phrase, MILLIONS FOR EMPLOYMENT, BUT NOT ONE CENT FOR DOLE.

The experience of European nations with the dole must be known to men as intelligent and well informed as members of the United States Senate.

The demoralizing effect of the dole in England among a people similar to our own must be a matter of knowledge to all senators.

But even without that knowledge, every intelligent and reasoning American should realize the unavoidable effect upon the morale of a people who become dependent upon government largess, and so gradually relinquish their upstanding dependence upon their own effort.

THE EXCUSE for the dole in England was even greater than any possible excuse or reason or argument for anything approaching the dole in America based on present conditions.

But there is not a wise statesman in England today who does not regret the dole, and who is not trying to devise means and methods to free the government from this burden and the people from its demoralizing effect.

Moreover, the dole has as degrading effect upon statesmen as it has demoralizing effect upon the recipients; and the government of England having once begun the dole is now afraid to stop it.

The statesmen of England are not more worried about the effect of the dole upon the public than they are about the effect of stopping the dole upon themselves.

They all realize that the dole has degenerated into a premium upon idleness, a bonus to nonproducers.

Instead of paying the people to work, the policy has been inaugurated of paying them NOT to work.

And those of the population who work pay taxes to maintain a part of the population in idleness.

So taxes constantly increase in severity, and the number of those dependent upon the dole constantly increases, and the plight of England constantly increases, and the cowardice of English statesmen constantly increases.

Lloyd George's present policy, however, is to substitute for the dole a program of EMPLOYMENT.

Such a program will possibly rescue England from the evils of the dole.

CERTAINLY a policy of public employment in this country would prevent us from incurring the evils of the dole.

The policy of employment for the idle and needy on public works is Mr. Hoover's program; and it is a splendidly sound and effective program IF HE WOULD ONLY PUT IT INTO OPERATION.

For, although Mr. Hoover has a world-wide reputation as an executive, he seems since he became President of the United States to have developed a faculty for conversation instead of execution.

His proposals are good; his performances are negligible.

For a year Mr. Hoover has been talking not only about the duty of the Federal Government, but of the state governments and of private enterprise to furnish employment.

But he has done nothing of sufficient consequence to accomplish that result.

BEFORE MR. HOOVER went into the White House, and before the nation became involved in the present financial depression, Mr. Hoover's proclaimed policy was a magnificent series of public

ZONING ACT CHANGE NEEDED

Council Consent Must Also Be Given to County Purchase In City, Foes Contend

Downtown and North Side town hall groups and residents of the Schenley Farms district are relying on three legal barriers to block the purchase of the Schenley Farms site for the town hall. This afternoon they meet again to prepare a message to City Council.

Here is the triple threat out of the law books which, those opposing the Oakland site say, may bring on a legal and political battle of no mean proportions:

1—The county has no right to acquire property for a town hall within the city without consent of city authorities.

2—The present zoning ordinance must be amended by Council to make the Schenley Farms site usable.

3—A taxpayers' suit against county commissioners is probable if all else fails.

ZONING OBSTACLE

The zoning obstacle is the more difficult of the first two, former Mayor William A. Magee, counsel for the Downtown Town Hall Association, pointed out at a two-hour meeting of the three organizations yesterday.

BELLE GETS 30 DAYS IN JAIL

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Belle Livingston, picturesque night club hostess, who declares she opened her so-called "salon" in the fashionable "50's" at the suggestion of Theodore Dreiser, the novelist, today was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

She was convicted of contempt of court for violating an injunction restraining her from violating the prohibition law. Her trial resulted from a raid on her "salon" five days after the injunction had been issued.

Belle, who faced a maximum term of one year before she was sentenced, steadfastly maintained the "salon" was not her own, and that she was merely in the employ of the night club owners.

HOOVER DECLINES TO ACCEPT NEW RELIEF COMPROMISE

DEADLOCK ON ISSUE HOLDS

President Spurns Request For Interpretation of His Power to Supervise Relief

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Hoover's refusal to interpret a prospective compromise relief bill, in advance of its enactment, today deadlocked anew the controversy between White House and Senate over federal appropriations for sufferers in the drought areas.

All factions in the Senate were willing to accept a compromise appropriating federal funds under any terms laid down by the President, providing he alone would have power to spend the money in buying food should drought distress get beyond control of the American Red Cross. The factional leaders merely insisted that the President agree the compromise would give him such a power. The deadlock came when Mr. Hoover declined to interpret his powers under the compromise.

The President's attitude stunned administration leaders in the Senate. They had been led to believe the President favored a compromise of the drought controversy, to avoid a special session after March 4. Consequently, they won over Democratic leaders to the point of negotiating a compromise, the exact terms of which were virtually left to the President. All these peace efforts were blasted when the President refused to enter the negotiations.

The battle over drought relief may grow in intensity, since there was no disposition to leave the subject to future interpretation by the President. Some Democratic leaders complained they were hoaxed in enactment of the $45,000,000 drought relief bill, which provided feed, seed and fertilizer loans. They said this bill prohibited loans for the feeding of livestock, other than work horses, and that cows, chickens and hogs were dying for lack of feed.

LEGGE TO QUIT FARM BOARD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Alexander H. Legge, whose chairmanship of the Federal Farm Board has been marked by considerable controversy, plans to retire soon after Congress adjourns on March 4, it was learned today.

President Hoover has several times sought to persuade Chairman Legge to remain, but has been unsuccessful, and it is the administration plan at this time to appoint James C. Stone, of Kentucky, to succeed him. Stone is now vice chairman of the board, and represents the Burley tobacco growers.

Chairman Legge declined today to either deny or affirm his intention of resigning, saying that any information would have to come from the White House.

CANNON OPENS OWN DEFENSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., today began a desperate fight to save his position as a leader of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Prosecution testimony against the fiery bishop was completed early today at the longest session since the trial began last Tuesday. During that time four traveling elders of the church have laid a veritable mountain of testimony before 12 clergymen-jurors from all parts of the South.

Bishop William N. Ainsworth, of Birmingham, president of the College of Bishops, who is supervising the trial, said he hoped the verdict would be reached some time today.

Bishop Cannon was presented a huge, ribboned basket of flowers when he appeared at the church yesterday by S. W. Cockrell, who said he was one of the bishop's parishioners, "as a token of esteem, gratitude and admiration." The Rev. William A. Shelton, pastor of Mount Vernon, was indignant and said:

"I told that fellow to send those flowers to the hospital (where Cannon is receiving treatment) because he is prejudicing the case by such a demonstration at the church."

Coolidge Praises Steps Toward Better Farming

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 6.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The problem of agriculture in recent years has seemed so much the disposition of surplus production that very little public thought has been given to soil exhaustion. Yet authentic reports tell us that each year about five and three-fourths millions more pounds of plant food are taken from the soil than are returned to it. That means a serious depletion of capital.

Calvin Coolidge

The immediate effect is the increase of acreage to maintain production. That increases the unit cost. When the harvest comes it is found the expense of raising the crop is so large that the profit is diminished.

A one crop system is mostly responsible for this condition. With diversification and animal husbandry the problem can be partly solved. But investigation has also shown that a wise use of fertilizers increases the yield, reduces the cost of cultivation per unit and so increases the profit.

The farm ought to be primarily a self-sustaining home with its own food supply. In trying to make it so by diversification, by needful fertilization and a wiser financing, the farm board is proposing a sound fundamental remedy for that part of agriculture entitled to public encouragement and support.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

works, so co-ordinated that all sections of the country would be benefited by the program and all sections would harmoniously support the program.

And many of us were won to Mr. Hoover's support by his dramatic relation of that program and by the benefits to the nation we could foresee as the result of its accomplishment.

But the plan has never been accomplished. In fact, it has never even been proposed in its completeness since Mr. Hoover sat safely in the presidential chair.

The impressive policies which inspired us to become supporters of Mr. Hoover have been forgotten or neglected by him, and instead have been substituted a lot of policies or prejudices of narrow scope and trivial importance.

Perhaps the red tape of government is responsible for some of this lack of accomplishment on Mr. Hoover's part, but surely he need not add to the red tape of government by the appointment of so many time-consuming commissions, who not only accomplish nothing of value, but REPORT nothing of value.

IF MR. HOOVER would outline in adequate detail a plan of public works and public employment of sufficient magnitude to harmonize with the greatness of the country, and the greatness of the country's need, and would give some sufficient evidence of desire and intention to put this policy into immediate and effective operation, the people would be satisfied and the Senate would be satisfied, and the crying need of the country would be satisfied; and some definite start would be made toward not only the relief of distress but the restoration of prosperity.

If so many futile and dangerous methods of relieving the acute distress are being discussed, it is only because the President has not proposed his sound plan of government employment in sufficient magnitude, or advocated it with sufficient earnestness and sincerity, or executed any part of it with sufficient promptness and effectiveness.

MILLIONS FOR EMPLOYMENT BUT NOT ONE CENT FOR DOLE should be the American motto of an American government.

But, Mr. President, if we are not going to have the dole LET US HAVE THE EMPLOYMENT.

Admits Killing Son, Judge Eases Plea

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Although Mrs. Gertrude Marty, 42, a prominent Cleveland woman, told Common Pleas Judge Walter McMahon today she was guilty of killing her 6-year-old son, the judge entered her plea as "not guilty by reason of insanity." Mrs. Marty was arraigned at her bedside in county jail where she is recovering from razor wounds suffered in attempted suicide. Her son was killed with the same weapon two weeks ago while he made childish efforts to defend himself.

Auto Stolen From Court House Yard

Automobile thieves have invaded the courthouse parking grounds. Waiting until the guards had left for the day, unidentified robbers yesterday stole the yellow Packard touring car assigned by the county to Barney Barnett, superintendent of the county garage. Barnett was descending the steps to the yard when his car shot out into Diamond street. He pursued, but the thieves eluded him in the rush-hour traffic. Police have broadcast a description of the machine.

G. O. P. LINKED WITH POSTAL LEASES

Effort Made During Campaign To Avert St. Paul Quiz, Senator Blaine Charges

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The late Secretary Good and 1928 Republican campaign tactics were linked with the disputed St. Paul commercial station lease today by Chairman Blaine, of the Senate committee investigating postoffice leases.

Questioning former Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett, Blaine asked if he did not know an effort was made to avert a grand jury investigation of the lease in August, 1928, because it "might blow up the campaign in the Northwest." He also said Good, then Western campaign manager for Herbert Hoover, was in communication by telephone with L. K. Drill just before the latter became the new United States attorney on August 1. Good spoke, he said, from President Coolidge's summer home in Wisconsin.

The conversation concerned the possibility of indictments from the St. Paul lease, Blaine added, with Drill saying he was not yet familiar with the case.

Bartlett said an effort was made by the then Postmaster General Harry S. New to shift responsibility for the lease onto himself.

He testified Good was in New's office when the latter ordered the lease executed. At New's direction, he said, a subordinate signed his, Bartlett's, name to the lease.

Yesterday Blaine said he would develop that the beneficiaries of postoffice leases had contributed more than a million dollars to the Hoover and Coolidge campaign chests.

HALL SITE FOES LIST SNAGS

Commission, an amendment to the zoning ordinance which has been protested by property owners of the district requires seven out of nine votes in Council and the Mayor's signature for passage. The consent ordinance requires but a majority and the Mayor's approval.

Advocates of the downtown site claim that at least three members of City Council may be counted upon to vote against changing the zoning of the Nicola site.

James C. Chaplin, president of the Downtown Town Hall Association, presided at the meeting of groups. After the conference, he said:

"These organizations will not only oppose before City Council the proposition in general to locate the Town Hall on the Nicola site, but the Schenley Farms group, in particular, will fight any attempt to change the zoning laws."

Opponents of the Schenley Farms site point out that under present zoning regulations building lines prevent the use of approximately 20,000 square feet of the 140,000 square feet in the lot.

The frontage on Fifth avenue is cut from 239 to 219 feet, on Bigelow boulevard from 239 to 179 feet, and on Tennyson and Ruskin avenues from 589 feet to 544 feet each. On the latter two avenues the lines must be 30 feet back from the street for a distance of 120 feet from Bigelow boulevard and a 10-foot setback must be used from there to Fifth avenue.

The possibility of a taxpayers' suit will be held in reserve in case other methods fail, Chaplin said. He declared that the suit against the commissioners is a probability if the way is opened by city council for the Schenley Farms site.

Asked regarding the basis of such a suit, Magee yesterday suggested that it might be on the grounds of improvidence on the part of the County Commissioners in buying valuable land when the Soldiers Memorial Hall property might be used for town hall purposes.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong declares that proper steps will be taken to procure the consent of the city or to consummate any other legal requirements in connection with the selection of the town hall site. He said:

"The city had no objection to the county building the tubes, bridges and boulevards in which the city had an interest. I cannot see why it should object to the erection of a building of the character proposed for a town hall."

County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher confirmed the fact that the law requires consent of the city for acquisition of a site and erection of a town hall.

SEE MELLON EXPANSION IN MERGER

Become Large Stockholders Of Bethlehem Steel in McClintic-Marshall Deal

New steel industry affiliations of the Mellon interests have been created by the sale of the plants of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation to the Bethelhem Steel Corporation.

The merger announced yesterday, by which Bethlehem will give $20,680,000 in securities and will assume $12,000,000 of bond obligations in payment for the McClintic-Marshall properties, will make the Mellon interests large stockholders of the steel company and will give them representation on the Bethlehem board of directors through C. D. Marshall, now chairman of McClintic-Marshall.

U. S. STEEL HOLDINGS

The Mellons have been large stockholders in the United States Steel Corporation for many years. This interest is understood to have been responsible for the fact that the Mellon companies purchased most of their steel requirements from subsidiaries of the Steel Corporation.

Now that the Mellons have a new investment in the steel business it is considered probable that Bethlehem will share in the orders placed by this group of companies.

Gulf Oil Corporation is a large user of steel for tanks, pipe lines and other types of construction. Bethlehem undoubtedly will share in this business.

BETHLEHEM AIDED

The Mellon have been large stockholders in the Pullman Corporation since they sold Standard Steel Car to this organization a year ago. While there is also a large Morgan interest in Pullman, Bethlehem's position in competing for this business probably will be improved.

Bethlehem has a large capacity for rolling structural steel, but has suffered from a lack of connections with steel fabricators. McClintic-Marshall is the largest organization in this business outside of American Bridge Company, a subsidiary of United States Steel.

Dapper Bandits Take $25, Give Victim Watch, Pen

Two genteel bandits early today presented to Frank E. Loveth, 17, attendant at the O. & P. service station, Forbes and Halket street, a watch and a fountain pen in return for the $25 they took from him.

The two men, well-dressed, drove into the station in an automobile bearing New York license plates. One asked:

"Where's the other man?"

Told the other attendant was at home, the man asked Loveth:

"How much money have you?"

Then without waiting for an answer he commanded:

"Give it to me."

Loveth, who lives at 1536 Methyl street, Beechview, complied. As the pair started for the car, the talkative robber turned and handed Loveth a 15-jewel gold watch and an expensive fountain pen with the remark:

"Hold this. We'll return the money in an hour."

The hour lapsed, but the pair failed to return. Loveth notified Oakland police, who agreed it was something new in banditry.

Pope Rehearses at Microphone for Broadcast

WORLD TALK TO BE GIVEN IN LATIN

Pontiff Submits Gracefully To Engineers, Masters of Diction, in Early Tests

ROME, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI already has begun speaking into a microphone in preparation for his first broadcast next Thursday, when he will inaugurate the new Vatican radio station.

Using the beautiful microphone installed in his private office, the Pontiff is submitting docilely, but whimsically, to a course of instruction, through which radio experts and monsignors of his household skilled in diction are putting him.

Thus far his voice has not gone round the world as it will next week, but it is being recorded in the radio station which the Marquis Marconi, of wireless fame, himself built.

TO SPEAK IN LATIN

Although the Pontiff will speak in Latin his advisers want his voice to carry over the air in such a manner as to thrill even the listeners who do not understand the words. The Pope has a clear, cultivated voice of rich timber, but of moderate strength.

When he addressed various gatherings of pilgrims from America during his golden jubilee last year he spoke in a low and almost conversational tone. It carried easily to the outermost listener and it is believed from this that the voice is well suited to radio transmission.

POWER PLANT OPENED

Taking another step away from the medieval atmosphere and tradition of the Vatican into the modern world of science, the Pontiff today inaugurated the Vatican's new electric power plant. He recalled that 52 years ago when he was first ordained a priest the papal palace was lighted by gas and candles.

He blessed the turbines, motors and generators which create enough power for the whole of the Vatican City, including the new radio station. Then he pulled a switch which started the dynamos.

160 STATIONS LINKED

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Nearly 160 American radio stations will broadcast the address of Pope Pius XI February 12, it was announced today. Both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System will carry the talk.

BEATEN FILM STAR FACES SUIT

'Frozen Face' Comedian Says Kathleen Key Threatened Him in Demand for Money

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 6.—The next round, a return bout, between Buster Keaton, frozen-faced motion picture comedian, and a film beauty, Kathleen Key, who claims to be a direct descendant of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," may be fought in the courts, attorneys for Miss Key indicated today.

Keaton admitted she "manhandled" him and wrecked his dressing room.

WILL FIGHT SUIT

The suit of Miss Key against Keaton was expected to be startling, friends of the actress said. Keaton countered suit threats by declaring that was prepared to enter court with a strong defense. He said Miss Key had threatened him for several months; that he had given her large sums of money, and that he was prepared to give her $4,000, and $1,000 extra to go to China, when she demanded $25,000. Finances, together with other weighty matters, were being discussed between Keaton and Miss Key in his studio dressing room. Keaton said:

"When she said $25,000, I determined to give her no more money. I tore up the $5,000 check. Then the fight started. She manhandled me something awful."

MODEL HUSBAND

Keaton, husband of Natalie Talmadge and the father of two children, has had his family life held up as an example to Hollywood's wandering husbands, and studio officials and friends intimated they would back him to the limit in event of a lawsuit. Keaton continued:

"We were old friends. I offered her a bit in pictures if she would reduce 20 pounds in two weeks. I bet her $500 she couldn't do it. She accepted the bet and she lost, but I paid her anyway, because times were hard.

"My conscience is clear."

Cliff Edwards, better known as Ukulele Ike, and Clarence Locan, publicity man, were present when the one-lady tornado struck Buster's changing room. Buster said Edwards and Locan fled when Miss Key went to work on him.

U. S. BUILDING BID DATE SET

Announcement has been made in Washington by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ferry K. Heath that bids for the federal building and postoffice in Pittsburgh will be called for on February 27. Secretary Heath gave this information to James Francis Burke, Pittsburgh lawyer, who called on him yesterday.

Heath said:

"We are making the stipulation that the contractor must assure immediate beginning of work."

Mr. Burke said it was "a Godsend" that the project was going to be started at this time. He said:

"Now we can have a handsome building located in the right place and suitable to all modern demands. It should be good for 50 years."

Before calling on Secretary Heath yesterday, Mr. Burke visited President Hoover and expressed hope that the unemployment situation in Pittsburgh should be adjusted within 30 days. He detailed to the President the employment program of the Allegheny County Emergency Association. The President indicated that he would like to have the program examined by Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the National Employment Commission.

HOTELS TO END RECEIVERSHIP

Plans to take the William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels out of receiverships are nearing completion, according to investment bankers interested in the properties.

E. C. Eppley, president of the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, one of the receivers, is understood to have made a proposal to the committee representing bonds under the second mortgage. If the plan is accepted, Eppley will place additional capital in the enterprise and a financial reorganization will be announced to lighten the burden of junior securities.

Foreclosure proceedings have been started under the second mortgage. This will be followed by a court order for the sales of the property. The second mortgage bond holders will then bid for the property. After the sale the reorganization will be put into effect, according to plans.

The Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, owner of the hotels, was placed into receivership on September 23, 1930, following defaults in the pavement of interest on the junior bond issues.

Swope Airs Views On Trade Recovery

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company, told interviewers the important thing in business now was the "better feeling among the people." He added:

"Nothing is definite. The recovery probably will be slow. That is just as well. If it were to come otherwise, it would not be so sound."

BREAKS RECORD, FOILS DEATH

for him to traverse the "measured mile" was 14.70 seconds.

His average time for the two miles, which gave him the world record, was 245.730 miles per hour, and his average time for the mile, both ways, was 14.65 seconds.

Capt. Campbell in a special interview with the press last night revealed that he narrowly averted a crash and possibly death yesterday during his run in which he established a new world's land speed record.

AVERTS DEATH

The captain disclosed that while on his north run of the course he was almost dashed into oblivion by the poor visibility, which found him headed into the dunes along the course. At a critical moment in righting the car onto the course he went into what is termed a "wobble" and by the merest of chance came out straight in the course. He said:

"It was a serious moment as I was going at the rate of 140 m. p. h. at the time. The visibility was so bad that before I realized it I was under a red flag marking the middle of the course, with the car headed diagonally. In righting it I went into a wobble and I want to assure you that I was damn lucky to come out of it."

CONTENT WITH RECORD

The captain said that while he was quite eager to go out for a record of 260 or better, his crew was content to let the present record stand as it is, and he hardly believed that he would attempt a higher record than he obtained yesterday.

He said that while the record was a source of satisfaction, he was disappointed that he could not prove that his famous racer was capable of 260 miles or better.

WIFE RELIEVED

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(Universal.)—Mrs. Malcolm Campbell, wife of the British speed demon who set a new automobile speed record on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., heaved a sigh of relief when told of her husband's achievement. Then she said:

"Thank goodness, he's done it safely. I only hope he won't think it necessary to try again. These last few days have been a terrible strain."

INJURED CO-ED SUES AUTOIST

A $75,000 damage suit was filed in Federal Court today by Miss Janet B. Merrill, 22, a former University of Pittsburgh co-ed, of Methuen, Mass., against Herman Rogal, of Bell Rock avenue, for injuries suffered when she was struck by the defendant's automobile.

In the bill, Miss Merrill charges she was struck by Rogal's car November 23 at Morewood avenue and Baum boulevard. She charges Rogal with ignoring a traffic light, fast driving and failure to sound a warning.

Miss Merrill also cited a long list of injuries, among them two broken legs. Some of the injuries are permanent, the bill says.

CLARA LAUDED BY ELINOR GLYN

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Elinor Glyn, who brought fame to Clara Bow when she called her the living creation of the girl with "It," declares that the flaming red-haired little star is the loneliest girl in Hollywood.

In an interview she said:

"Clara Bow has a very likeable personality, and it is a pity that she should be the victim of circumstances as of late. I would very much like to tell you what a good-hearted and generous girl she really is.

"Even after securing fame in the film production of 'It,' she was still a saucy little child, who always touched me because of the tragedy in her eyes and the loneliness of her real soul. She had never known a mother's care.

"I wanted her to read and educate herself, and I gave her books to read, because I used to tell her that she would be a great tragedienne one day.

"I think that little lonely Clara is the victim of circumstances and weakness of will. I shall always hope she will change and come up to my belief in her."

GIRL DROWNED, MURDER HINTED

DETROIT, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A 12-year-old school girl was drowned in Detroit River, off Belle Isle, last night under circumstances which led detectives to believe that she may have been thrown deliberately to her death.

The girl, Doris McDonald, was heard screaming by two boys as they walked across the bridge to the island. When they finally located her body, it was floating down river, 200 feet from the bridge and 150 feet from the island shore. She ceased to struggle and went down as the boys, Chester Whitney and Irving Thweatt, watched.

As she disappeared, the boys told police, an automobile which had been parked near an abandoned boathouse was turned about and driven away.

ALMA RUBENS: 'HELLO! I JUST GOT A JOB IN A STAGE SHOW!'

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER VII.

I was to get a try-out, at last! I didn't sleep a wink all that night. I was up at daybreak and washed and scrubbed myself until I felt that I was as pure as a lily. The minutes dragged like hours. It seemed like the clock was standing still; that 8 o'clock would never come.

Half an hour before that time I was waiting at the stage door. A dozen times in the next hour I had seen Broncho Billy walk in and out but he paid no more attention to me than if I had been a fire hydrant.

Miss Rubens

Finally, I could stand the suspense no longer. And, upon his re-appearance, I timidly stepped forward and handed him the card Rock had given me the previous afternoon.

"This gentleman told me to come here for a try-out," I managed to blurt out.

Broncho Billy gazed at it a moment, then looked at me as though for the first time he had realized that I was not some inanimate object.

"Oh," he said. "That's what you're waiting for, eh? I don't think you are the type, but come on back stage."

Fairly walking on the clouds, dizzy with excitement and with my heart playing leapfrog with the back of my tongue, I followed. The entire cast, some 20 odd girls, arrayed in tights, were being put through their paces by one of his assistants.

They were all of the burlesque type so popular in those days. Big of limb and hip and bust and far older than myself, they presented a jaded appearance which, with their obvious sophistication and audible wise-cracks, made me feel still more self-conscious.

First Pair of Tights

Dazed as I was, I could sense that they were jealous of me, that my youthful freshness and bloom made them envious and that I would be dependent upon my own resources if I was to learn the tricks and trade of a chorus high-stepper.

I was taken in hand by an elderly matron who led me into a dressing room and arrayed me in my first pair of tights. As I recall it, they were light green in color, with an orange middle of ruffled satin and a headpiece of drooping feathers, intended to give me the appearance of a poll-parrot.

Another assistant took me in hand and directed me to watch the other girls a few minutes so I could gather some idea of the steps. Happily, for me, they were easy, and with my confidence somewhat restored, I assured him that I could duplicate them.

"All right! Go ahead then," he directed, keeping time with up and down motions of his hands. "One, two; one, two; one, two," and I broke into the steps so handily that he immediately placed me in the lineup with the other girls.

We continued practicing for more than an hour, and apparently, we were getting along first-rate. Then the other girls were dismissed for the lunch hour and Broncho Billy, himself, asked if I was ready for a voice try-out.

She Doesn't Fall

"Oh, oh," I said to myself. "Here's where I fall flat!"

But I was game. After they had wheeled out a dilapidated old piano, they handed me a sheet of music and the pianist rattled off the prelude to Alexander's Ragtime Band, then at the height of its popularity.

In cracked tones and off key I sang the first verse and was just starting the chorus—really getting warmed up to my work, you know—when Broncho Billy gave the signal to stop, and turning to me with a rather pained expression, said:

"As a singer, you're no Jenny Lind, no Swedish nightingale, but I guess you'll do in a pinch. You got looks and you dance pretty well. You're hired. Thirty-five and you pay your own on the road. Come back at nine tomorrow. Got to rehearse another week before we open up."

And, with that, he turned away.

I stood rooted in my tracks, too happy, too paralyzed with joy, to move. Rose La France was an actress at last. A real actress with a job and everything, with a real salary and, in one more week, she actually would be one the stage, ready to receive the acclaim of her public.

Finally, I came to. I went back to the dressing-room and changed to my street clothes, putting on one of my stockings wrong-side out, in the excitement, without knowing it until I got home and my mother reproached me for my carelessness.

Thirty-Five a Week

"I've got a job, mother," I squealed as I flung open the door. "I'm on the stage. Thirty-five a week. I'm a principal in 'The Girl at the Gate!'" I didn't know any more what a principal was than I had when I talked to the Graumans about being a quick-change artist. But my mother was duly impressed, despite my hysterics.

"Well, well, honey," she calmed me, taking me to her ample bosom and smothering me with kisses. "I'm so glad, dear. Maybe your dreams are going to come true. I hope so, dear, for your own sake."

My father, too ill to move from his bed, patted my hand and also wished me success.

Until nightfall I walked around the house simply bubbling over with exuberance. Every few minutes I would call up a different girl friend and tell her of my good fortune. Our telephone bill that month must have been something terrible.

Then the first of my worries began. We had a woman lodger who used to be in the show business, but who had been employed in an office downtown since her husband died a few months before. She was a perfect old killjoy.

The first thing she said after I had informed her of my good luck caused me to lose another good night's sleep.

"Why, child," she said, "you haven't got any symmetricals. How do you expect to make good in the show business without them? You'll have to get some or else you won't click."

Now I had not the slightest idea what symmetricals were. But, as I have said before, I always have had that queer little touch of pride inherited from my father, that would never allow me to admit my ignorance in the presence of others.

ZOE BARNETT

Miss Barnett, one of the principals in Alma Rubens' first show. She helped Alma greatly.

"Oh, that's all right," I said in a matter-of-fact voice. "I'm going to get them in the morning. I ordered them as soon as I got the job."

Then I broke away from her as quickly as I could, determined to get me some symmetricals, whatever they were, right away quick, if not a lot sooner.

Without saying a word to my mother, I put on my hat and went down town. I walked into a theatrical costume place, which kept open evenings, and went to the proprietor, a woman, with what I considered my best air of sophistication.

"I'm in the trade," I assured her. "In 'The Girl at the Gate.' I need some symmetricals, and I must have them at once. How much do they cost?"

"Well," she replied, apparently amazed at my cyclonic manner of approach. "What kind do you want? Wool or cotton? The wool cost $15. The cotton, nine. And, I'll have to make them to order. I can have them for you by tomorrow night."

Alma Undaunted

Not a word did she utter that might enlighten me as to their purpose. But I drew forth a dollar and gave it to her as a deposit on the cotton ones, telling her I would pay the balance when I called for them the next day. Then I started to walk out.

"How can I make them if I don't measure you?" she recalled me. I stopped and she drew out a tape measure and began measuring my calves. Even then I wasn't sure what it was all about, but I was paying my good money and asking absolutely no questions.

Nor did I know where I was going to raise the other eight dollars.

I went home and told my mother where I had been. Always practical, she said it would be a good plan to make inquiries; to find out the use of symmetricals. We went up to our lodger's room but she had gone out.

Well, to make a long story short my mother managed to raise the eight dollars, and next day, after rehearsal, I called to get my purchase, which was already wrapped up, awaiting me.

I took the bundle, paid over the cash, and ran almost all the way home. Breathlessly I want to my room and tried them on, over my stockings. This operation completed, I couldn't see that my appearance had been improved in the least, but I went downstairs and showed them to my mother.

She was of the same opinion but then, like me, she was unfamiliar with things theatrical and laid the habit of wearing symmetricals, like the wearing of the green, was a custom, no doubt which must be rigidly adhered to.

No one mentioned symmetricals at rehearsal, so I didn't either, but I kept them in readiness should I be called upon to don them.

So, the long week of rehearsal sped by.

My fellow chorus members did nothing to break the icy aloofness of their first meeting, but the leading man, Walter Catlett, since become one of the world's greatest comedians, and Zoe Barnett, the leading woman, were extremely nice to me.

Zoe, especially, did everything she could to help me along. I guess she took pity on my youthful greenness. Anyhow, she frequently called me to her dressing room when the day's rehearsal ended, took me with her shopping, and even accompanied me home for dinner one evening, much to my delight.

Not even this friendship, however, served to break my pride sufficiently for me to ask her about the symmetricals, much as I was aching to do so.

Then came opening night.

The tragi-comic incident of opening night — how Alma inadvertently "wowed" the audience and stopped the show — and how she planted a firm foot on the first rung of the theatrical ladder will be told in tomorrow's installment. Don't miss it!

Kerr to Probe Charges on City Contracts

Controller Kerr today said:

"I shall investigate the charges contained in the letter. I have always instructed Director Succop to award contracts for supplies to the low bidders. He has informed me that his department purchased selected varieties. He said an examination was made of the different brands of canned goods. Sometimes they would be sent to Mayview without identification mark and the dieticians there would select the best brands.

"Sometimes Succop said the quality of one brand was much superior and that sometimes cans were not well filled.

"I asked him about this practice of 'selected goods.' He told me he would notify me when the goods were to be examined. Thus far in this month I have received no word from him, so I take it that no awards have been made for canned goods for city institutions."

From other sources it was learned that such awards have been made.

QUALITY SOUGHT

Succop, asked regarding the food contracts, declared that quality is the governing factor in awarding the orders.

He said:

"The selection of food is made by a number of doctors, dieticians and officials at the city institutions and are then approved by me as head of the department. The Parke goods are known to be of high quality and are used by at least 80 per cent of the public institutions in Pennsylvania. There is nothing in the rules which forces the acceptance of the lowest bid on a thing like foods. The quality is the important thing."

Mr. Houston's letter to Council, in part, follows:

It reads in part:

"I wish to bring to your attention a matter relating to the expenditure of the city's funds for the purchase of food supplies for the various city institutions. More specifically your attention is directed to the fact that contrary to the interests of the taxpayers, the award for the purchase of canned goods is made almost invariably to one concern who is just as invariably the high bidder. I would ask you to bring before you the director of the department of supplies and request him to justify his action.

CHARGES MONOPOLY

"The name of the concern, as the records show, which has a monopoly of the city purchases of canned goods at the highest prices, is L. H. Parke Company. This, as I understand it, is a Pittsburgh branch of a concern which has its headquarters in Philadelphia, and I want to know why this company, to the detriment of the tax-payer, is preferred over reputable bidders who are citizens of this town. All I can learn in response to my own inquiries is that this Philadelphia concern has 'very powerful influence.'

"As I understand it, under the ordinances of the city of Pittsburgh, the director of the Department of Supplies must make the awards to the lowest responsible bidder. Apparently, in order to free himself from blame, the director, after making all the awards to L. H. Parke at the highest price, sends to the controller's office his schedule, marking after the awards to Parke the word 'selected' so as to give the controller the impression that the merchandise from the various bidders has been examined. In the instance of my own concern, I can assure you that no samples were asked for and I have inquired from other bidders who tell me the same thing. The designation, 'selected' is therefore a mere subterfuge on the part of the director.

"As another indication of extravagance I might state that Mayview and other city institutions demand fancy red salmon, which costs nearly three times the grade known as pink salmon. According to United States Government bulletins, the pink salmon has identically the same food value as the red and three-fourths of all the salmon consumed in the country is pink. Other hospitals and institutions use the pink almost exclusively. Why not the city?

John M. Irwin, secretary of the Parke company, and manager of the Pittsburgh branch, asked if he had any comment to make on the Houston charges, replied:

"We have nothing to say."

Police Inhalators Again Aid Child

For the second time within the last 48 hours, police today rushed inhalators to the home of N. A. Krebbs, 2984 Ruthwood street, Baldwin Township, to administer oxygen to Norman, Jr., 10 years old, seriously ill of pneumonia.

Oxygen inhalators being used by nurses gave out early today, and police of the Carrick and Overbrook stations rushed inhalators to the Krebbs home and administered oxygen in relays to the boy until new tanks were secured. The child is still in a serious condition.

PAROLE GIVEN BANK CLERK

Harry B. Rollins, 28, of 203 Yardley way, former savings teller of the Exchange National Bank, pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to embezzling $1,701 of the bank's funds, saying he had spent part of the money playing the numbers racket.

He was paroled for three years by Judge R. M. Gibson who observed:

"I should send you to some institution for the mentally deficient."

P. B. Beatty, cashier, testified in behalf of Rollins and asked for clemency. Rollins' wife and three-year-old child were in the courtroom.

Aside from the numbers, Rollins said he had spent the money on his family. The amount was taken in small sums during the past year, the court was informed.

'NUMBERS' MEN TAKE WEATHER

Four of the leading numbers racketeers, still groping for a fix-proof number for their lottery, let it be known today that they had turned to the weather reports, abandoning the figure obtained from the United States Treasury balance and Customs receipts.

With this latest change the leaders hoped to establish harmony among the lottery bookers, who have been using one system or another for the last two months.

The numbers men were shocked out of their complacency yesterday when they learned that the Treasury balance and Customs receipts number did not suit their purpose, in that these figures were compiled at 4:30 p. m. on the day before the numbers books were closed. They decided to book on the Treasury-Customs figure for Thursday, not paying off, however, until Saturday.

They indicated that they would book today on the United States Weather Bureau reports of 8 a. m. and 12-hour low temperatures of Monday and following mornings. Books would close at 12 midnight, payment would be made the following noon on publication of the official temperature figures.

The system which, it is understood, will be used is as follows: The 8 a. m. temperature column and the eight-hour low column will be combined into one column of 51 four-figure numbers. The column will be totaled and the fourth, third and second figures from the right, or the thousand, hundred and ten digits, will form the number. The totals, which run into the hundred thousands, are said to vary widely.

POLICE NUMBER CASE TO JURY

The "numbers" case of Dominic Cinquegrani, who at his police court hearing denounced two East End policemen as agents of the lottery racket, is scheduled for presentation today before the county grand jury.

The case will be presented by an assistant district attorney. Detectives Robert Burke and James Noon, the men implicated by Cinquegrani, will testify. Cinquegrani is at liberty on $2,500 bond.

Meanwhile, Public Safety Director James M. Clark and his colleagues are continuing their investigation into the affairs of Burke and Noon. The trial board appearance of the officers has been delayed by two postponements.

Cinquegrani charged he was employed in the "numbers" racket by Burke and Noon, and that they arrested him because they thought he was "cheating." Burke and Noon denied the charges.

LIVING RESCUED IN QUAKE RUINS

WELLINGTON, Feb. 6 (INS)—Damage caused by the series of earthquakes which destroyed Napier and Hastings was estimated today to total $125,000,000. Estimates as to the number of dead still range from 700 to 1,000.

Several persons have been rescued from the ruins of their houses after having been buried for two days.

Thousands of destitute residents have been evacuated from the two cities to Auckland, Wellington and other localities.

Relief work has progressed so satisfactorily, however, that orders for evacuation of Napier have been rescinded. Food supplies in that city are now considered ample and adequate sanitary arrangements have been made so that the danger of pestilence and disease has passed.

The railroad line into Napier, which was disrupted, has been reopened to traffic.

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 6 (INS)—Cloudbursts, floods and landslides today had caused extensive damage and much suffering in Queensland and New South Wales. It is feared that several persons have been drowned.

INTRUDER NAPS, FIGHTS POLICE

Returning home from work early today, John Lardis, of 203 Bouquet street, discovered a stranger asleep on a couch in the living room of his home. Lardis called Oakland station for a policeman.

When Patrolman Joseph Kearns aroused him the stranger threatened to beat up Lardis and the policeman for disturbing his slumbers, police say. When Patrolman Kearns started to leave the room with his prisoner the latter resisted. During the tussle the policeman's uniform was torn, and both he and the prisoner suffered bruises. At the police station the prisoner said he was William Crosby, 30. He refused, police say, to make known his address.

Lardis said he did not know the intruder. A rear window in the Lardis home was found jimmied.

Sheriff May Help Harry Langdon To Move

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6—(AP.)—Harry Langdon, film comedian, and his wife are house-hunting, and their decision to move was made by a Superior Court judge, Langdon said:

"We had a disagreement with the man from whom we were to buy the place."

Court records showed the disagreement arose after Langdon made a $1,000 down-payment, assumed a $17,000 first mortgage and gave a $14,000 trust deed, but failed to make any further payments.

The sheriff is ready to aid the Langdons in removing their furniture, at least as far as the sidewalk, if the house was not vacated by Monday.

BOY WHO SHOT FATHER FREED

Edward Aufderheide, 18, of 64 Mayfide street, Carrick, arrested in connection with the shooting of his father, Harvey, 38, and mother, Elizabeth, at their home last Friday during a family quarrel, was discharged today at a hearing before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court.

Mrs. Aufderheide testified that during a quarrel she and her husband fell. Their daughter, Betty, screamed, and Edward rushed downstairs and shot the father in the hip because he thought he was choking his mother. The mother asked that the son be released. ATWATER KENT RADIO with the GOLDEN VOICE

To people who want to save money on a radio

WHEN a radio is offered to you at a price strangely low, ask yourself:

"WHY is the price so low? Who made this radio? How good is it? How many families own it?

"Was it made to give top-notch performance through the years, or is it one of those 'bargain' radios? If you should ever need new parts, would the manufacturer be there to supply them—or has he gone out of business?"

You can't buy a gold dollar for fifty cents. You can't buy Atwater Kent quality—Atwater Kent dependability—Atwater Kent satisfaction—at a bargain price.

But you can have the new Golden-Voiced Atwater Kent, with all it means in happiness and in freedom from service costs, at a very moderate price. It's only a few cents a day—so little you will never feel it.

Own the best! Be sure with the new Atwater Kent. Be satisfied. Yes—and be thrifty!

MODEL 70—Lowboy, as illustrated above, $119. Other beautiful models, including Radio-Phonograph combination, from $125 to $195. Prices less tubes.

Mr. Carroll has been, since June, 1929, business manager of the Press, and has been well known in advertising and newspaper circles in the country for a number of years.

Beginning as a salesman of classified advertising on the Detroit Journal, he became a member of the display department of the Detroit News for three years, moving from there to the advertising managership of the Bay City, Mich., Times.

From 1911 to 1913 he and his brother, Dan Carroll, were the New York advertising representatives of a group of newspapers including the Indianapolis News. A year later he became advertising manager of the News.

For 14 years he guided the advertising business of this Indiana paper, coming to the Pittsburgh Press as assistant business manager in 1927.

He is a member of the advisory council of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives, served as president of this group from 1923 to 1927, and has been a member of the National Advertising Commission of the International Advertising Association. He was born in Lapeer, Mich., and now lives in Mt. Lebanon.

ACQUIT BISHOP'S SON AS SLAYER

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—To start life anew, James M. Maxon, Jr., was to leave today or tomorrow for his home in Chattanooga, Tenn. The 21-year-old son of the Protestant Episcopal bishop, coadjutor of Tennessee, was acquitted last night by a jury of second-degree murder charges.

He was accused of beating to death David Paynter, aged printer, in a rooming house quarrel.

After he heard the verdict the youth walked to the bench where his father was sitting and kissed the bishop.

Maxon had testified he had struck several men in a fight at his rooming house here last April, but denied he had killed Paynter. The prosecution claimed the aged lodger was killed in a free-for-all fight.

WILSON URGES GRAPE BAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The use of California grape concentrates for the manufacture of wine in the home should be prohibited by law, Dr. Clarence True Wilson, head of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, declared today in a letter to Senator Tydings (Dem.), of Maryland, leader of the Senate's wet bloc.

Tydings read the letter to an amused Senate.

Dr. Wilson proposed that all wets and drys join in amending the pending Howell bill, designed to make the capital "bone dry," so as to outlaw the California grape product, for which Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt is counsel here. Tydings heartily indorsed the dry leader's appeal.

Bank Employe Held In $207,000 Theft

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Charles T. Pierce, a 27-year-old employe of the National City Bank, was arrested today and charged with the theft of $207,000 in negotiable securities from the bank. The district attorney said all but $9,000 of the securities had been recovered, and he expected to get back the rest.

Don't neglect your child's COUGH or COLD

TRY this milder "counter-irritant." Good old Musterole now made milder for babies and small children. So pleasant to use and so reliable—apply Children's Musterole freely to the affected area once every hour for five hours. That's the safe, sure treatment that millions of mothers and leading doctors and nurses recognize and endorse.

Musterole gets action because it is a "counter-irritant" not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain.

That's why this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally.

Keep full strength Musterole on hand for adults and Children's Musterole for the little tots.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

"She's a Septic!"

Many women want to be, dese... to be, and could be far more popular than is their lot. Doctors know why. So do nurses. They call such cases septics.

To remedy obnoxious body odors and bad breath, you must recognize their cause. The trouble is deep-seated. Fraught in the colon. Semi-constipation takes millions of systems septic. There may be a daily movement, but all the waste is not eliminated. That matter that remains poisons the blood, and permeates the perspiration. It taints the breath. Nature is signaling her need of a Tiny Calcium Wafer.

Calcium wafers work wonders in one's appearance, too. With the inner system sweet and clean, the complexion clears most marvelously. Eyes brighten. Teeth whiten. The tongue is no longer coated, even on arising. And you never need take another harsh cathartic.

Perhaps you are a septic, and don't know it. Try a tiny wafer of calcium, and see! It may make all the difference in the world. Leave harsh, habit-forming cathartics alone. You never need them if you take an occasional calcium wafer.

TRY THIS THOROUGH TEST

A five day test should prove to you very conclusively the system's need for Stuart's Calcium Wafers, and the benefit from these little wafers. Your druggist has them for 10c. Or the family size 60c. Start this test today!

JESTERS, VOCAL STARS, FASHION TALK INCLUDED IN GREAT RADIO BILL

By DARRELL A. MARTIN
Radio Editor

Radio Rex holds royal court in his "air castle" tonight.

Jesters plenty with Jones and Hare, Ray Knight, Irvin Cobb and Doc Rockwell. A princess with Jessica Dragonette. A fleet entertainment committee with Clyde Doerr and his Saxophone Octet.

Such a gorgeous night would not be complete without something about fashions. So we go to Paris direct in WJAS at 10 o'clock to hear Capt. Edward Molyneux speak from the Rue Royale salon on what the well dressed people at court should wear.

It's a homecoming for Cosmo Allen to consult the oracle for complete details.

We cannot pass on without calling particular attention to Ray Knight's "Night Club of the Arctic" on WCAE at 9 and the "Theater of the Air" broadcast with Doc Rockwell as m. c., WCAE at 10:30.

Up in Hartford, Conn., Martha Attwood, soprano, gives a special program on WTIC at 9:30.

QUESTION A DAY:

What has become of Scrappy Lambert and Billy Hillpot? F. W., Carrick.

Answer—Broke up for a while and each went his own way. But they're together again in electrical transcriptions. Hear KDKA at 6:30 tonight.

Louis L. Kaufman is to do the "Evening Stars" program from New York next Wednesday afternoon at 3:20. It's to be an NBC tribute to KDKA over 33 stations.

Maurice Chevalier is to sing "Louise," "Valentina"—a Paris hit—and "You've Got That Thing," on WCAE Sunday at 8:30. His time is to be increased to an hour starting March 8.

Scenes from current plays on Broadway are to be given over WEAF-WCAE every Saturday night at 11:30 beginning February 14. Marc Connelley, Pittsburgher, is to introduce his play, "Green Pastures," as the first offering. The leading actor, Richard B. Harrison, will take part. Spirituals in the play will be sung.

Everything's set for the Pope's talk next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock over KDKA, W8XK, WCAE, WJAS. The weatherman in New York says transmission conditions over the Atlantic will be favorable, but Charley Horn and NBC engineers are taking no chances. They have provided for every emergency, down to plans to relay the talk by other stations if bad weather sets in.

* * *

Talk about this boy Vallee all you want, he knows his Barnum. Bringing Eddie Cantor to the mike in Miami last night was a wise gesture. Eddie was exceptionally funny. We can also pat Rudy on the back for his recent interpretations, particularly the one of Maurice Chevalier which was praised by the Frenchman himself.

* * *

John McCormack's silver smoothness was most beautifully manifest in "Kathleen Mavourneen," although we liked the other Irish ditties.

Lovers of good music who have revelled in the Saturday night broadcasts of the Chicago Civic Opera Company are to have an opportunity of seeing the cast in person at Syria Mosque next Monday and Tuesday.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Tampa was right in his WCAE broadcast the other night. Anybody can find "Health, Wealth, Happiness"—in the dictionary.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. — The speech-making activity of Herbert Hoover and his cabinet is seriously interfering with the radio warbling of the crooners.

Hoover's microphonic manner still lacks the convincing force and ardor we have come to expect of the White House tenant. Of the political bigwigs, Charles Curtis is one of the most impassioned of speakers, but his message invariably has the ingredients of the oratory of the McKinley era.

Political figures are among the most wary of radio's army. They can sniff commercially tainted ballyhoo at considerable distance and refuse emphatically to have anything to do with it. The voice of Curtis, however, was recently—and strangely—identified with a commercial program, proving, if nothing else, that press agents are as adroit today as in the days when Broadway was Broadway.

The hot wave apparent on the loudspeakers is occasioned by the march of Harlem's maestros and entertainers to the microphones. Only colored bands still go in for furious jazz effects. Perhaps, Dr. Ziegfeld is to blame. He once pronounced Duke Ellington's band the best in the land.

The radio is still free, thank Allah, of talks by the winners of beauty contests.

The latest wisecracker on the air is Richy Craig, Jr., who, formerly was on the payroll of Ziegfeld. Craig's style is not unlike that of Ray Perkins. He pokes a derisive finger at the more showy phases of our civilization. He calls himself a "vagabond monolgist" and promises not to play the saxophone or sing. He speaks of Chicago as the "City of Silent Men" and adds that the radio is something new to him, though he "has an uncle who is a radio announcer and his wife doesn't speak English either."

Phillips Lord is introducing his radio character, Seth Parker, in person and in costume to the congregations of various New York churches. And vaudeville houses also are beckoning. Wonder how the Palace Theater, regarded as the hardest-boiled audience in the land, would receive Seth and his hymn-shouting neighbors. Because they are authentic the Palace, we have a notion, would give them a warm welcome.

Through the character of Seth Parker, Lord has made the Maine fishing village of Jonesport—it is not far from Bar Harbor as the sea gulls fly—famous and civic-conscious as one retreat in sophisticated America where old-time hosannas are actually sung with old-time zeal.

Band music consistently assails the eardrums. There must be dozens of bands on the air at present, all paying tribute to Sousa, all doing right by Rossini. Good old Rossini! His spirit hovers benevolently over every band from Canada to the Gulf. The "William Tell Overture" is the backbone of every bandmaster's repertory. He would no sooner discard it than he would discard his baton. It has been blared forth more than any tune known to man. Nothing dims its glory.

Shakespeare, the backbone of the drama, is given but scanty attention in the broadcasting studios. I doubt if the radio men will find much time for him until television enters the parlor. "Hamlet" has been offered in condensed version from time to time, but listeners, they say, did not take kindly to it. They ran, not walked, to the dial—to turn it off. Maybe, they are waiting for Barrymore.

It was not so long ago that Barrymore — John of the royal family—recited Hamlet's Soliloquy on the air. The setting was anything but appropriate. He faced the microphone just after and just before a Hollywood theme song.

HAPPENINGS IN GOTHAM AND HOLLYWOOD; NEW PICTURE REVIEWED

Ivan Lebedeff, Russian Actor, May Put His Own Life in Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Fawcett Newspapers)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.

Hollywood's latest sensation is the plan of Radio Pictures to star Ivan Lebedeff, the Russian actor, in the story of his own life.

Contracts already have been signed for Bonn W. Levy, author of "Mr. and Mrs. Bottle" and "Mrs. Moonlight," to come to the coast and write the part.

Lebedeff, who is one of Hollywood's most graceful hand-kissers, was trained for military service in the court of Emperor Nicholas, and had a varied and colorful war record. At the beginning of the late conflict he joined the Third Regiment of Dragoons. Later he became a member of the flying corps on the Rumanian front, where he was wounded and taken back to Odessa. There he became a food administrator.

Ivan Lebedeff

Eventually he ran afoul of the Bolsheviks, was arrested and escaped prison.

Besides Russia, he has lived in Berlin, Constantinople, Vienna and Paris. It was in the French capital that D. W. Griffith saw him and brought him to this country for a part in "The Sorrows of Satan."

MORE GRIEF FOR RONNIE

Roland Colman was being twitted about a Salt Lake exhibitor who said his pictures were made for the territory east of Kansas City.

"Ah, me," said Ronnie, "now, I guess they'll want a Western version, too."

MORE ECOES OF THE COUP

According to Arthur Caesar, the latest hot rumor is that Warners are dickering for Leo, the M. G. M. lion.

HANK GETS OFFER

If Joseph M. Schenck's plan goes through, the Marquis de la Falaise will direct Mary Pickford in the French version of "Kiki."

The United Artists executive saw the first French picture directed by the Marquis at R-K-O, and promptly made him an offer.

"Hank" just as promptly accepted, with the proviso that the picture must await the completion of the French version of "Mme. Julie," his current assignment.

Of course, R-K-O will have to be consulted, but no doubt the deal can be arranged.

BICKFORD REDEADED AGAIN

Now that peace has been signed between Charles Bickford and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the red-headed actor is being kept busy with picture assignments.

Charles Bickford

Though he still has a long engagement in "The Squaw Man," the studio already has picked him to be co-featured with Wallace Beery in "Bugle Sounds." This was the picture originally intended for Lon Chaney.

Bickford may be chastened but he is still the same Bolshevik underneath. With refreshing frankness, he characterizes this column as "rotten reading." As if that were an original thought.

DO YOU KNOW

That Roscoe Ates once took lessons in stuttering before going into vaudeville?

Pioneer Days

Irene Dunne relives the old pioneer days in "Cimarron," film version of the Edna Ferber novel, which opens with a midnight show Sunday in Warner.

Pepper Visits Old Friends in Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Philadelphia, returned yesterday for a time to his senatorial locale of several years ago.

Coming to Washington to attend a meeting of trustees of the Washington Cathedral, Pepper spent some time on the Senate floor renewing acquaintances. He called on his former colleague, Senator Reed.

WINNIE LIGHTNER AND BROTHER FRED IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown, rowdy screen comics, are co-featured in the Stanley in the comedy, "Sit Tight." The picture is having its world premiere in Pittsburgh. But this, remember, doesn't make it a better picture. It is just Brown and Lightner at their slapsticking again.

They are down on the farm in this one—a health farm. It is a place where the matronly smart set regains its youthful figure and a college hero is developed into a wrestling champion.

Winnie operates the farm and Joe is her assistant. They manage a lot of goofy comedy exhibitions. But there is too much sameness to their same old selves.

AN OLD MOVIE TRICK

The big climax is a wrestling bout. It looks like the hero is out of luck. But his sweetheart turns up at the ring side in the nick of time. Which is an old movie trick!

"Sharps and Flats" is the stage show. It has a knockout tumbling act. Six husky fellows whirl about the stage like Fourth of July pin wheels. Theirs is a keen display.

It also has an amusing canine act. Dogs of all sizes, colors and creeds do everything their trainer doesn't want them to do—which, in this case, is just as they should do.

THERE'S BROTHER FRED

Featured in the revue is Fred Lightner, Winnie's brother, making it a sort of Lightner week in the Stanley. His act is small time. It is tawdry horseplay.

The blonde Lillian Dawson sings a couple songs, the stage orchestra has a specialty about "Smiles" and Ed Lowry, he who is the master of ceremonies, gives his "Gigolo" song.

David Broudy remembers it is Abraham Lincoln's birthday month in the overture and Bernie Armstrong remembers his home town in the organlogue.

NOTES ABOUT PLAYS: SHARP TO REMAIN

Gilbert Miller will present Otis Skinner in his new play, "Marius," in the Nixon next week. The cast includes Donald Blackwell, Mary Howard, Flavia Arcaro, Fred Tilden, Vieux Port and Homer Barton.

The presence of Death on the stage might not at first be considered as a figure provocative of cheerful reaction. However, in "Death Takes a Holiday," the uncommon comedy in which Philip Merivale will star in the Alvin next week, Death is not only the central figure of the opus, but a fascinating and thoroughly human personage as well, it is pointed out.

Announcement was made at the Thursday matinee that the George Sharp Players will continue in the Pitt, regardless of a previous statement that next week would be the last. The coming production is "The Alarm Clock," which will be succeeded by "Its a Wise Child," which was seen here earlier in the season as a Belasco production.

Lapse

There was a moon last night as I came home,
A soft, pale moon that made my thoughts race back
To other times when life was froth and foam,
And glamour was a trait I did not lack;
Gay lovers passed—a trifle scornfully,
Intent on thefting magic from the night,
Small thought they had to give to such as me—
A wistful rover—reckoning his plight.

Yet, not so long ago, I walked with you,
And laughed at nothing in the ghostly street;
Oh, we were sure that one and one made two—
That life was fair and rapture strangely sweet;

I know I promised you I wouldn't write,
But, dear, it was a lovely moon last night!

—And Contents Noted

"I have just finished another story which I will be able to sell, but it is a tepid little thing without any elements of a good story, except the necessary form that all editors so admire. Benjamin Franklin founded the Post and wrote a story for it. They are still running it every week. The form is perfect and all that the editors have to do is fill in the proper names and the details of the contest for the climax. The hero wins either at golf, tennis, racing, yachting, basketball, ping pong, bridge and thereby gets the girl and the gold. The story ends abruptly with a chaste salute.

"Some of the mags reverse the process and begin with the girl discovered without her clothes. In the end she becomes a good woman, but the reader is assured that it won't last, and if he will stick around for another month she'll have her clothes taken off again by John LaGatta, Arthur William Brown, or James Montgomery Flagg, while Rupert Hughes toys with her in every other paragraph.—Don't use the name!"

"I know you meant well, but the man wearing the monocle at the El Patio is not the head-waiter. He's the directeur!—The management."

What, inaccurate again?

"Pardon me for asking some information, but you are supposed to know so much about New York City. For instance, is it true that there is a fellow who bills himself as 'The Male Greta Garbo?'—John Halden, Detroit."

Yes, an obscure female impersonator, who describes himself as "The World's Most Exquisite Youth."

"Up at our house the argument still goes on concerning Ruth Etting and Ethel Merman. Which of them gets the biggest salary? — Pearl Baker, Kelly street, Bronx, N. Y."

Miss Etting gets $3,000 weekly in vaudeville. Miss Merman, a newcomer, gets half that much in a musical.

"I know you go in for this kind of story. Fix it up your own way if you like it. Last year he was one of the best-known figures in the Brooklyn beer business and he formerly owned a notorious hotel and restaurant there. He now is completely down and out and the police or his gang enemies had nothing to do with it. Maybe it is the retribution thing, eh? Anyway, he was clever at handling men, and the tougher they were, the better. But like a fool he put all his money in his wife's name and she took a run-out powder on him. He now is broke and is around begging those he once helped, to set him up in a speakeasy so he won't have to go crooked!"

S'too bad.

"Dear Mr. Winchell," writes David Schwartz, of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, "I just returned to my desk and found your letter of sometime ago denying some of the matter in the story we syndicated about your career. I immediately incorporated a correction. Perhaps I should have advised you sooner about this. I may say that the information was given to me by one generally credited with being in the know, and I therefore had no reason to doubt it. Since, however, I have learned that he is somewhat peeved at you for some report you published relative to him. It may be that there was on his part a mo-Improvement and development of wharves on the Monongahela and Allegheny River fronts as a means of providing off-street parking facilities for a greater number of automobiles was to be discussed at a meeting of the Better Traffic Committee's off-street terminal facilities section today at a luncheon meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. tive for revenge. I hope the retraction fixes the matter up."

A retraction is always worse than the original article. Thanks, anyway.

"Please jot down five shows to see in as many evenings. I am due in New York next week—J. Martin Cole, Detroit."

"Grand Hotel," the best drama. "Private Lives" and "Once in a Lifetime," the best farces; "The New Yorkers" with Clayton Jackson and Durante; Joe Cook in "Fine and Dandy."

"What in the world ever became of the Radio Franks, who once were as popular on the air as Mr. Vallee? I've lost complete track of them. Did they split up the team?—Rose Rackin."

They are warbling their song routines these evenings at The Stork, a rendezvous in the latter 50s. They recently were in vaude.

"Nancy Carroll, who has been at the Florida beaches for a long spell, hasn't had her picture taken in a bathing suit. Why?—Norma Kent, N. Y. C."

Miss Carroll is fussy like that. She will not permit the photogs to snap her in a bathing suit unless they agree to show the prints to her before released for publication.

"You recommended the song, 'Wind in the Willows' the other day. The song stores say they never heard of it.—Beatrice Mayer, Brooklyn."

It is a London rage and I so noted. Various orchestras are playing it here, however. Perhaps the song stores will order it soon. A beautiful tune.

"You could be of great aid to a young fellow if your published this," writes Jack Harris, "because he follows your brand of stuff regularly and probably will see it. He is a clever juvenile on the Rex Cherryman order. He has been out of work for over a year. A new show is being cast in New York and the producer demanded a Rex Cherryman type because the role needed one. Casting agencies offered the producer every type but the Cherryman kind, but the showman refused to accept the offerings, spurning over 26 applicants. Finally, one casting man thought of my friend. He showed photos of the boy to the producer who sighed with relief because the type had been found. Rehearsals were held up to locate the kind. And what do you think? I just learned that he is touring the Middle West in a Ford with some pals for three weeks because he couldn't afford to pay his furnished room rent in New York! Unless he sees this in the meantime I fear the producer will have to go ahead and use some other guy. What kind of luck do you call that?"

PASTOR SCORES MODERN AGE

A belief that the influence of the machine age is drawing modern man away from fundamentals of the Christian Church was expressed by the Rev. Dr. J. Bradley Markward, of Springfield, O., in an address at the twenty-second annual banquet of the Lutheran Brotherhood of Pittsburgh last night in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Speaking on the subject "Modern Man and Fundamentals," Dr. Markward said that at no time since the Reformation has the church been under such adverse criticism as it is today. He urged members of the brotherhood to unite in their effort to stress the Divine rather than the materialistic features in mankind.

Dr. Markward, formerly was pastor of Calvary Lutheran Church, Wilkinsburg. He was introduced by Charles Lehman, toastmaster. The Rev. Dan B. Braven, Lutheran Jewish missionary, asked the invocation and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. B. Sause, pastor of Bethany Church, Dormont. About 500 persons attended the banquet.

BRICK MEN HEAR ROAD EXPERTS

Ohio River boulevard was among brick boulevard construction examples discussed today at the closing sessions of the twenty-fifth anniversary convention of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association in the William Penn Hotel.

The local boulevard was explained by George Hockensmith, superintendent of the Booth & Flinn Company. Other speakers will be T. A. Van Amburgh, of Fort Worth, and Fred R. Williams, Cleveland. E. C. Blosser, of Cleveland, lead discussions on the subject.

Brick for street railway paving and brick fillers and bedding courses were discussed by national leaders in the industry. Among the speakers were A. Taurman, of Birmingham; R. H. Simpson, Columbus; George B. Sowers, Cleveland; Prof. J. S. Crandell, University of Illinois; P. J. Freeman, Pittsburgh; H. P. Chapman, Columbus; Luke Savage, McKeesport; Prevost Hubbard, New York, and Prof. T. R. Lawson, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

DRIVER CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

Accused of having sped away in his automobile after forcing a police emergency car onto the sidewalk at Liberty avenue and Water street by running through a stop signal, Ferdinand W. Balley, 36, of 520 Grove street, Sewickley, was chased by police to Galveston avenue, North Side, and arrested. He was lodged in Central Police Station on a charge of violating the automobile laws.

City Physician W. H. Evans examined the prisoner and pronounced him under the influence of liquor, the police report stated. Balley was arrested by Acting Captain Thomas Gross and Patrolman Howard Caldwell and Rodger Virtz.

Fall Down Stairs Fatal to Man, 82

SOMERSET, Pa., Feb. 6.—Peter Fink, 82, died at a local hospital of injuries suffered in a fall down a flight of steps at his home.

Dreaded Days

When women pity and men misunderstand

What a miserable feeling—suffering in silence — and shunning those we'd like to see—declining those pleasant invitations. Modern women no longer know such monthly martyrdom. They use Midol.

Why don't you try these tiny tablets that take effect in five to seven minutes! They neither hasten nor hinder Nature's regular process, but they do relieve you from all pain. Those days you formerly dreaded will become just an incident.

Midol is the marvelous discovery made by specialists. It is not a narcotic, yet it ends periodic pain. And if you anticipate the time, the expected pain will not appear at all. Tiny tablets in convenient little case obtainable at every drugstore. Just try Midol for painful periods, sick headaches or other muscular pain, and be convinced.

REVIVAL SEEN BY ATTERBURY

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6. (AP.)—W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, believes that the American business depression has reached the turning point and that the proposed railroad consolidation would aid in bringing about improved conditions. Gen. Atterbury gave his views yesterday upon his return from a trip to the Pacific Coast.

The best thing the American people can do to aid in bringing about normal conditions, Mr. Atterbury said, was to "stop grouching," and added:

"If we are to judge by previous experience, it would appear that the present depression has pretty nearly run its course and that we must be around bottom. I think that through the course of events we shall commence to show an improvement. It is not going to be sudden, because I think things in general are going to come up about the way they went down."

Turning to politics, Gen. Atterbury said he would not reconsider his resignation as Republican national committeeman from Pennsylvania. He submitted his resignation last fall during the gubernatorial campaign.

52 Cases Reported For City Quarantine

The City Health Department today reported the following new cases in quarantine: Pneumonia, 15; chicken pox, 20; measles, 12; scarlet fever, 1; whooping cough, 2, and erysipelas, 2.

Guinan Girl to Aid Lingle Suspect

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP.)—One of Texas Guinan's former night club entertainers, sought as a witness by the state in the case of Leo Brothers, charged with slaying Alfred Jake Lingle, arrived here and announced she would aid the defense, instead.

The witness is known as Miss Trina Tweedie and was appearing in a dancing act at Guinan's Green Mill Club here at the same time Brothers was employed at the place. She said she would appear as a character witness for the defendant.

How to End Painful Piles Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of Pile sufferers have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves or cutting remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To end Piles an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID and prescribed it for 1000 patients with the marvelous record of success in 9?9 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist with a rigid money-back guarantee.

Dr. Leonhardt's prescription has a wonderful record of success right in this city and May's & Liggett's invite every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID and guarantee to refund the purchase price if it does not end all Pile misery.

SIFT DRY AGENTS' USE OF LODGE CARDS

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

There is the newspaper story, supposedly legend but actually fact, of the Philadelphia reporter hurriedly sent to Harwick, Pa., to cover a mine disaster.

Mr. Pfarr

Impatiently his city editor stood beside the telegraph editor awaiting his young reporter's story. One edition went to press, a second followed and still there was no news. Finally the telegraph operator shouted that the reporter's copy was ready for the wire, and he began copying the lead—

"God sits tonight on the mountains above Harwick—"

That was enough for the city editor, who wanted news of the number killed and injured. He stopped the telegraph operator and shot this wire back to his reporter:

"DROP DISASTER STOP GET PICTURES AND INTERVEW."

The reporter was Richard J. Beamish and the disgusted editor was James Benn. Today Beamish is the secretary of the commonwealth and good friend of Gov. Pinchot—and probably chuckles as he follows Gov. Pinchot's battle against the Public Service Commission—of which James Benn is a member and leading defender.

His name is Tom, and he is past middle age. Each afternoon he drops into a local hospital and goes from ward to ward greeting all the patients. If he sees you for the first time he'll ask your name. The next day he'll greet you, "Hello, George, how's the appendix?"—provided, of course, it's appendicitis that's got you, and that your first name is George. Sometimes he's in a hurry and just shoves his head in the door, clasps his hands above his head in greeting, and shouts a general hello. He's on the city payroll as a laborer.

No less an authority than Ben Anderson, a good story teller and a good secretary to E. V. Babcock, reports there is a dearth of good stories. He blames it on (you've guessed it) the depression. Ben contends that people are in such low spirits they aren't interested in fashioning stories. The best story he has heard since the market slump (and this proves or disproves his contention) is the one about the speakeasy proprietor.

"How's business?" somebody asked the speakeasy man.

"Well," the speakeasy man explained, "my racket is like politics. You don't make much money, but you sure meet a lot of prominent people."

There is a new feature in the radio which tells of the adventurers of two police reporters, naively called Cub and Scoop. Their conversation is as authentic as Thurston's nightly business of severing a woman in half. Cub and Scoop proved this before they had been on the air five minutes. Scoop said something derogatory about Cub's city editor. Cub flared up and threatened to punch Scoop in the nose for that remark. We have known probably 100 police reporters, and we asked one of them, Frank Shenkel, what a police reporter would do if somebody took the name of his city editor in vain. Mr. Shenkel replied: "The reporter 'd probably buy him a drink."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

PONCA CITY, Okla., Feb. 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Five thousand feet in the air, and Hawks is starting a dive for the field to land at Ponca City. Played at the best agricultural school in America, Oklahoma A. and M. Their cattle win all the shows, and their boys win all the judging contests. It's not a raccoon coat college. Say, what's the news? I don't get to read we are moving too fast. Have the admirals got dressed for Butler's trial yet? How does Mr. Hoover stand on prohibition this week? I was down in West Texas last week and they are feeding goats the Wickersham report.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

CHAPTER XXVI.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

The necessity for controlling the use of strong drink among our troops had been brought forcibly to my attention through the ease with which alcoholic beverages could be obtained.

The use of light wines as a part of the French ration was simply the continuance in the army of the universal custom of the people of having wine with their meals. The wines and beer were not so objectionable, but strong alcoholic spirits were regarded by the French themselves as dangerous and were prohibited for their troops, but the prohibition was not well enforced outside the zone of the armies.

Gen. Pershing

The problem of preventing our troops from drinking the stronger liquors was difficult, especially at the ports of entry. Efforts to obtain enforcement through conferences with local authorities and through agreements with the port and district officials were made from time to time but with little result.

I finally appealed to Prime Minister Clemenceau for support, but he would only counsel local officials, as he did not wish to declare a "state of siege." (Martial law.)

In the end it was necessary to take the matter in our own hands and declare every bar and restaurant where the heavy liquor was sold as "off limits" for our troops. Our officers were directed to give their personal attention to the enforcement of this order.

My most earnest thought and attention was given to this subject early in our experience and throughout the war. The habit of drinking itself was not only detrimental to efficiency but it often led to other indiscretions.

Drinking Decreased

While it is a question whether under ordinary circumstances in times of peace a healthy moral sentiment cannot be created as a safeguard against excesses, yet during the war when men were not surrounded by the restraining influences of home life limited prohibition was necessary.

Even if it had been possible of enforcement I should not have issued orders to our armies prohibiting the use of light wines or beer.

Our armies are simply a crosssection of the people whom they represent and their psychology is the same, and any attempt to enforce such an order would have led to difficulties. Moreover, co-operation by the French to that extent would have been out of the question. There was in fact comparatively little drinking in our armies and what there was decreased noticeably after the prohibition against strong drink.

About this time a cable was received from Washington that some publication at home had made a sweeping charge of both immorality and drunkenness against our men. No such statement could be based on fact or could serve any purpose except to cause unnecessary anxiety to parents and relatives and perhaps satisfy on the part of some one an unworthy desire for sensation. In reply, I cabled in part as follows:

"There has never been a similar body of men to lead as clean lives as our American soldiers in France. They have entered this war with the highest devotion to duty and with no other idea than to perform these duties in the most efficient manner possible.

Praises Soldiers

"Engaged in healthy, interesting exercises in the open air, with simple diet, officers and men like trained athletes are ready for their task. Forbidden the use of strong drink and protected by stringent regulations against other evils and supported by their own moral courage, their good behavior is the subject of most favorable comment by our Allies.

"American mothers may rest assured that their sons are a credit to them and the nation."

My diary notes the following:

"Paris, Thursday, January 10, 1918. Have appointed Maj. Robert Bacon to be colonel and A. D. C. on my staff. Bishop Gwynne, deputy chaplain general, British Army, and Bishop Brent were my guests at Chaumont on Monday. Went over aviation matters with Foulois, Bolling and Dodd.

"On Tuesday Brent and I discussed increase in number of chaplains, which we both favor. Left for Paris same evening.

"Began discussion with Robertson and Maclay yesterday morning about shipment of troops. (Gen. Sir William Robertson was chief of the British Imperial General Staff, and Sir Joseph Maclay was a British expert on shipping). Have organized I Corps headquarters under Maj. Gen. Liggett, with Col. Craig as chief of staff."

Bishop Brent had been selected by me for appointment as chaplain with a view to his being the chief of the chaplain corps which it was planned to organize. The bishop did not approve of this idea, and in deference to his opinion, and upon his suggestion, a permanent executive committee of chaplains was appointed to study the problems involved and make

STILL'S OWNER SOUGHT AFTER DRY RAID

Federal Agents Report 3 Seizures in Clairton, With Arrests of 2 Men

The owner of a moonshine plant in Waddell street, Clairton, was being sought today by prohibition agents following a raid on the place yesterday.

A 250-gallon still, 7,000 gallons of mash and 2,900 pounds of corn sugar were found in the building, agents said. The still and sugar were taken to the government warehouse and the mash was destroyed.

Another raid in Clairton on the home of James Sestitto, at 629 Ridge avenue, yielded the raiders a 50-gallon still, they reported, and a 25-gallon still was confiscated in the home of John Milosovic, 44, of 619 Montooth street.

Milosovic and Sestitto were released on their own recognizance.

JEWISH CHARITY PLANS TOLD

Steps under way to widen the scope of some of the 17 agencies in the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies were described last night to 50 Jewish leaders from McKeesport, Glassport, Elizabeth, Clairton and other towns by A. M. Oppenheimer, president of the federation, in the Penn-Harris Hotel, McKeesport, headquarters there for the federation's $450,000 drive, which opens February 15.

Oppenheimer, tracing the growth of the federation's service since formation of the central body in 1912, pointed to the annual deficits which have resulted from failure to finance the organization adequately and said no appeal had been made since 1925. Support must be provided, he said, in the amount of $450,000 for 1931 unless hundreds of poor are to be ignored.

QUIZ BEGUN ON WARNING TO EAGLES

U. S. Attorney Seeks Facts After Official of Order Charges New Raid Device

The warning of A. J. Dougherty, state secretary of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, to lodges of the organization, that government prohibition agents have in their possession "missing" membership cards of Eagles and are using them to gain entrance to lodges, was discussed at a conference of government attorneys and prohibition enforcement officials.

Asked what steps had been taken regarding use of such a card at Harrisburg by a federal agent, Acting Deputy Administrator Robert S. Krause and United States Attorney Louis E. Graham said further investigation was needed. A statement issued after the conference said Krause was seeking the facts and would report to the United States attorney.

Neither the government attorneys nor prohibition officials expressed opinions publicly on use of the cards.

The conference, lasting more than two hours, was attended by Krause and his legal adviser, G. W. Rouse, representing the prohibition office; Graham and Assistant United States Attorneys James I. Marsh, Raymond D. Evans and J. H. Dilley.

The warning of Dougherty had been called to the attention of Evans and on January 21 he sent a letter to Krause asking if the statements were correct. When no reply was received the conference was arranged.

City Fireworks Ban Up for Discussion

The proposed ordinance to ban the use of fireworks in Pittsburgh, now pending before City Council, was to be discussed at noon today at the first meeting of the advisory committee of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council in the Chamber of Commerce. E. T. Whiter is committee chairman.

The ordinance was introduced to City Council by the Safety Council.

Uninjured in a fall through the window of the Famous Furniture Company, at 6308 Frankstown avenue, last night, Isaac Sparr, 71, of 7334 Frankstown avenue, faced a hearing in the East End Police Court today on a disorderly conduct charge, police said. Sparr, according to police, had been drinking.

Gov. Pinchot Hires Trainer to Keep In Trim

HARRISBURG, Feb. 6—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot is keeping himself in fighting trim by undergoing rigorous physical exercise every day.

C. W. "Doc" Miller, formerly a physical instructor engaged in Y. M. C. A. work, has been engaged by the governor and every day he and the chief executive work out in some sort of exercise which will produce a good healthy sweat. Then comes a good rub down and a shower, followed by a toasting under a new type electric lamp.

The physical exercises are in addition to the frequent walks which the governor takes along the Susquehanna River front and his numerous automobile drives with top down in the early morning.

WESTINGHOUSE GETS BIG ORDER

An order amounting to more than $100,000 has been placed with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company by the Southern Sierras Power Company. The order includes three 5,000 kva transformers for the San Bernardino sub-station at San Bernadino, Cal., and supplying power for a 15,000 kva synchronous condenser and four 5,000 kva power transformers to be located near Las Vegas, Nev., at Hoover Dam site to be used to supply power for construction work on the Hoover Dam.

OPERA SUCCESS HERE FORECAST

"There is now every reason to expect that the financial results of the two evening performances by the Chicago Civic Opera Company at Syria Mosque next Monday and Tuesday will replace Pittsburgh on the operatic map."

This was the statement of Eugene L. Connelly as he left the box office at Mellor's after a preliminary count with the ticket sellers, Alonzo H. Brockett and his son, Ashley Brockett.

MANAGER OPTIMISTIC

Connelly, who is managing the opera season for a group of some 60 Pittsburghers with faith in the city's ability to appreciate and digest the cultural things, was in an optimistic mood. He said:

"Herbert Johnson, who manages the Chicago Civic Opera Company for the men and women who back it and expect to lose money every year, has predicted Pittsburgh's operatic future on the box office results of this year's engagement. Four years have elapsed since we have had any grand opera by first string opera companies, and until a few weeks ago it looked as if Pittsburgh was permanently off the grand opera route.

"Johnson, however, persuaded me to take over the local management on the condition that if we were able to put it over successfully, from the box office point of view next Monday and Tuesday, the Chicago company will include Pittsburgh in its annual tours, and, if we so desire, extend the period of the opera's Pittsburgh performances to a full week. It is with this hope in mind that 60 citizens of Pittsburgh have guaranteed next Monday and Tuesday's performances.

PREDICTS SELL-OUT

"Looking at the fast emptying rack in Brockett's ticket office at Mellor's, I am happy to say that the expectation of an opera season next year, and for many years thereafter, is entirely within the range of reasonable probability.

"Gauging the advance sale by past experiences, and the traditions of last minute demand for

Blank 'Diplomas' Deceive Mt. Lebanon Audience

Mt. Lebanon High School graduates expected to receive their diplomas today although they were supposedly given their certificates at commencement exercises held last night.

The students gravely accepted beribboned rolls of paper from Principal L. E. Perry, although both pupils and teachers knew what the graduates were getting was blank sheets of paper.

Delay of mail from the offices of the Board of Education resulted in the diplomas failing to arrive in time for the exercises. Teachers and students were the only ones who knew about the deception, the audience having been kept "in the dark," members of the faculty said.

PA. COMMISSION ACTS ON HIGH TARIFF

Pittsburgh Shippers Notified Of Executive Session in Harrisburg by Secretary

Donald O. Moore, traffic manager of the Chamber of Commerce, was notified from Harrisburg yesterday that local shippers and industrialists will know Monday whether the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission will suspend the high tariff on rail rates on iron and steel shipments in the Pittsburgh district.

The Commission will meet in executive session in Harrisburg Monday, and announcement of the decision probably will be made at that time, John G. Hopwood, secretary to the commission, wrote to Moore.

The high rates became effective May 20 at the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. As the territory affected was within Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh shippers appealed to the State Service Commission to suspend the rates on the grounds that they were discriminatory, would jeopardize the existence of local industry and add at least $2,000,000 to Pittsburgh annual freight bill.

There was no effort toward suspension, but the state commission instituted an investigation during which three hearings were held. At the close of the case on last December 8 with oral arguments in Harrisburg, it was expected that a decision would be given early this year.

AIRPORT BOARD APPOINTMENT PROPOSED

Commerce Chamber Leaders Uurge Experts be Given Charge of Municipal Field

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night prepared a communication to be sent to county commissioners asking appointment of an airport commission or board to have charge of operation, maintenance and operating personnel of the new municipal airport. The communication read in part:

"The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce is of the opinion that the most practical manner in which to conduct the affairs of the municipal airport is by means of a commission or board whose members will be men familiar with aeronautics and airport management. This body should have full charge of the operation of the airport and should have authority to select the operating personnel."

The matter was brought to the attention of the chamber's directorate by its aeronautics committee, made up of fliers, airport technicians and operators, after a long study of conditions existing at the airports in other large municipalities.

Beauty Expert Hails Charm Of Pittsburgh Women

Pittsburgh women compare favorably with women all over the world, according to Madame Gladys Ogilvie, beauty and hair expert appearing in Pittsburgh this week and next.

She said:

"I have met Pittsburgh women here and abroad. They are charming, entertaining and versatile, although comparatively conservative. They have more poise than French women, a more relaxed and subtle charm and beauty. French women depend upon emotional stimulation for their bright eyes. The American woman has a different, a more spontaneous type of beauty."

Madame Ogilvie predicts a long popularity for shoulder length hair. She said:

"French women have determined to have hair not longer than shoulder length. In this way they can have the privilege of short hair for sports and the comfort of the 'chignon' for evening dress."

Madame Ogilvie is one of seven sisters, Jessica, Clara, Ann, Elizabeth, Mabel and Georgina. The Ogilvie sisters, born in San Francisco, have beauty salons in New York, Washington, Boston, Paris and Biarritz, France.

4-PILLAR TUBES
winning Radio Public

New type radio tube thrills listeners. Demonstrates great improvement in thousands of sets

Notice the four strong pillars. With this solid foundation, the many fragile parts in the tube can be assembled with watch-making accuracy, and cannot move a hair's breadth from their fixed position! They are always poised for performance, like the strings of a fine piano, tuned for a concert!

In ordinary tubes, the many delicate parts have only a two-legged foundation — like the goal-posts on a football field. Two supports instead of four! Jolts, bumps, vibration from dynamic speakers — all can impair their vital accuracy. That means uncertain results . . . unreliable reception!

The radio service-man, who keeps your set in repair, is a technical expert . . . he knows tubes! He can explain the value of the 4-pillar principle, and demonstrate it, in your own radio set.

ENGINEERING science has developed a new and better way of constructing radio tubes. Taking a sound, fundamental principle, and applying it to tubes for the first time! The result is 4-pillar tubes . . . the first and only real advance in modern tube design.

Four sturdy pillars anchor the elements fast, in an Eveready Raytheon. Ordinary tubes use only two.

Four rigid supports . . . one at each corner of a square . . . give the elements in 4-pillar tubes a firm foundation. Protecting them against vibration from dynamic speakers, keeping them safe from the dangerous jolts all tubes receive in shipment, and guarding their split-hair accuracy so that their tone remains true, clear and powerful.

Other tubes, with two-post construction, are subject to all of these dangers. Why not be sure?

Free Home Demonstration

There's no longer any reason to miss a note of the beautiful, clear tone your radio can give. You can try a complete set of these tubes at home, with no obligation. Find out how quickly they act when you turn the switch! Listen to the volume and realism they give to a program. Notice how free they are from hum and noise. Give them a real test in your own radio! No electrical test in a dealer's store can tell you as much as that.

National Carbon Company, Inc., has arranged with Eveready dealers to give you this free home test. Let the tubes speak for themselves. If your present tubes are a year or more old, you can't afford to miss this opportunity. Call the nearest Eveready Raytheon dealer now!

ARMED BANDITS HOLD UP GAS STATION AND DRUG STORE

NORTH SIDE MAN ROUTS THIEF FROM HOME

Robbers Take Car and Cash From Motorist; Boys Held In Ingram Auto Thefts

Confronted by an armed robber in the office of the Atlantic Refining Company service station, Baum boulevard and Melwood street, early today, J. J. McMillin, the attendant, was forced to turn over $35 from the cash register.

Awakened by a noise on the first floor of his home this morning, F. C. Harsch, of 1514 Hatteras street, North Side, ran downstairs in time to see a man leap from a kitchen window and flee. Two dollars were stolen from a purse on the dining room table.

An armed robber walked into the drug store of Charles Kutscher, at 1501 Buena Vista street, North Side, menaced Kutscher with a revolver and looted the cash register of $15 last midnight. The man fled up Buena Vista street and disappeared before Kutscher could follow.

ROBBED OF CASH, AUTO

Charles Weinstein, of 6313 Dean street, was robbed of $85 and his automobile by two armed men as he was about to place the machine in the garage at his home last night. As he stepped out of the car the pair confronted him with revolvers, he told police.

A purse snatcher robbed Mrs. Camelia Venternia, of 177 Mayflower street, of her purse, containing 60 cents and keys, while she was walking in Lowell street near Meadow street last night.

While members of the family were absent, burglars entered the home of G. A. Smith, 2122 Beechwood boulevard, and stole clothing and jewelry valued at $500, Smith reported to police today.

TAKEN IN AUTO THEFT

The theft of five automobiles in Ingram within the last three weeks is believed to have been solved, borough police said, with the arrest last night of four boys in the West End a short time after they are alleged to have stolen an automobile in Ingram. According to Motorcycle Patrolman W. T. Shaffer, the four have admitted stealing the five machines.

A short time after Harry Hodges, of Wynn avenue Ingram, informed police that his car had been stolen Shaffer was notified that the boys had been found in the stolen machine in the West End. Three of the boys were lodged in Juvenile Court detention home, and the fourth released in the custody of his parents. Because of their youth the Sun-Telegraph will not print their names.

MR. AND MRS. REES SCULLY . . . WITH THEIR IRON FOLIAGE

IRON DESIGNER ART PIONEER

By PENELOPE REDD.

Pittsburgh has been so busy transmuting iron into gold that none has thought to convert iron into an immediate and time-honored beauty of its own.

Penelope Redd

The descendant of an early Pittsburgh family is appropriately enough a pioneer of this old art in a new way. Indeed, the the exhibition of wrought iron designed by Rees Scully, now on view at the William Penn, emphasizes the one decorative art logically indigeneous to Pittsburgh.

Mr. Scully's ideas of design reconcile a respect for the most characteristic European traditions with an independence that is ever reasonable.

Consequently, his adaptation of the tree of life has a nicety of balance between imaginative license, traditional treatment, and the inherent qualities of iron as a medium.

Mr. Scully never errs on the side of transposing virile iron into arabesques calculated to rival the delicacy of lace, as do too many contemporary designers in iron.

For diversion he introduces all manner of mobile winged creatures. Flowers, foliage and animals prevail as his chosen elements.

Mr. Scully's dual sense of design is manifest in the group of tables, lamps and other decorative objects fabricated from aluminum and chromium-plated metals. These are combined with bakelite and other mediums born in laboratories.

These decorative explorations in mediums strange to art, require a necromancer-designer. He must be architect and electro-mechanical engineer in addition, to create the suave blend demanded by moderns. In this adventure, Rees Scully has succeeded.

SLEUTHS SEEK SLAIN MAN'S ROOMMATE

Landlord's Son Finds Body Of Miner in Bed, Head Crushed With Iron Bolt

County detectives investigating the murder of a man believed to be John Chinkovich, 46, a miner, of Mollenauer, today began a search for his roommate, who was missing when Chinkovich's beaten body was found in bed in his room last night.

The victim's head apparently had been crushed with an iron bolt about a foot long, which lay near the body. The body was discovered by Bruno Jaskovich, 13, son of the owner of the building, Stanley J. [illegible]vich.

The boy frequently read to the men, and last night when he entered he found Chinkovich dead. Bruno had gone to the basement room of the men almost daily since Friday, but found the shades drawn and believed the occupants sleeping.

Chinkovich and his roommate, known only as George, were employed at the Coverdale mine of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company, according to Constable Ben Smith, of Bethel Township. Deputy coroners believed the victim had been dead since Friday.

seats, which is typical of opera seasons, an old-stager like Lon Brockett predicts a complete sell-out for Tuesday night, when the double bill of Cavalleria Rusticana and I Pagliacci are to be given, and the possibility of a similar result for Monday night, when Lucia di Lammermoor is to be given. There are, however, still many excellent seats left for late comers.

FAVORITES TO BE HEARD

"If there are any who are prone to criticize the selection of these operas for the Pittsburgh season, a criticism, perhaps, born of a desire to hear new things, one need only point to the success of these operas in other cities, and to the group of fresh young singers, many of them entirely new to Pittsburgh, who will be found in the casts: Tito Schipa, Claudia Muzio, John Charles Thomas (who has never been heard here in grand opera), Margherita Salvi, Ricardo Bonelli, Charles Marshall, Antonio Cortis, Jenny Tourel, Hilda Burke, Giuseppe Cavadore, Constance Eberhart, Chase Baromeo, Lodovico Oliverio, Alice d'Hermanoy, Theodore Ritch, Robert Ringling and Mario Fiorella. Perhaps not all of these artists should be classified as young, but most of them are and all of them, I am sure, deserve to be classed among the great artists of their day.

"Pittsburghers may be sure if this one thing, that they will see as fine productions as have ever been given anywhere, and that, succeeding financially, we shall see them again and again."

Club to Fete Norwegian Feminist

Men as well as women have been invited by the New Kensington Business and Professional Women's Club to hear Froken With, brilliant Norwegian journalist, speak next Friday evening in Malta Temple. The club will hold a reception in honor of their guest at 6:30 o'clock, and dinner will follow at 7.

The club women feel that bringing Miss With to New Kensington is a decided feather in their caps, for she is one of the outstanding speakers on this year's club programs. She is an ardent champion of the political and economic rights of women everywhere and has won fame throughout Europe as an author and feminist. Two years ago, aroused by the fact that in 20 years of suffrage, Norwegian women had procured but one representative in Parliament, she founded the Women's Political party and is now its president.

The Epoch Club's "Adventuring in Architecture" yesterday took the members into "Outstanding Examples in Modern Building" by way of Mrs. George Oliver's paper and into "Penthouse Apartments" with Mrs. Philip Harrison as their guide. Mrs. Burt Anderson discussed "Modernistic Interiors," illustrating her paper with pictures, some of which were in color. Mrs. Albert Morgan's deferred paper on "The Story of the Machine—Will it Destroy Civilization?" completed the full and intensely interesting program.

A keenly interested audience of Twentieth Century Club members heard J. Fred Lissfelt, music critic of the Sun-Telegraph, speak on "Traditions" yesterday afternoon in the clubhouse. Mr. Lissfelt sketched scenes among the peasants in Brittany, the Basque country, Italy, Switzerland, Austria and Germany, where he had found people giving the quintessence of music in their lives. From these scenes, he took his hearers to the intimate circle of three or four great artists and showed how they have, through art, improved on folk music. He indicated how both the natural instinct and art principles must be taken into consideration in criticism.

A two-piano program of music by Henrietta Meyer Bodycombe and Marian Clarke Bollinger rounded out the afternoon's rich enjoyment.

BRIGHT HUED FROCKS WORN WITH THE CHIC BLACK COAT

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—It is pleasant to answer the call of the great outdoors just now, if the great outdoors is only represented by a walk through the Bois. For not in some time have street clothes been more charming and more alluringly practical than they are at this moment. To be able to wear a smart black coat luxuriously befurred together with a bright hued frock and a becoming hat is almost a compensation for not going South. At least, it's an excellent frame of mind to be in, don't you think? One sees more fabric coats than wraps of fur; women seem to be just a little weary of fur both during the day and in the evening, and so they are fur-bearing creatures more frequently at night when the lordly ermine and the sumptuous sable rule with regal mien.

RICH FURS are cleverly used on day coats, but there is never a suggestion of too elaborate an effect. Broadcloth and velvet are both used, most women preferring broadcloth for the coat for less formal day wear. Hats are black, with touches of blue or some other color, the trimming often matching in hue the furs with which the coat is trimmed, a most subtle ensemble note.

WE SHOW TODAY sketches of a hat and a coat that should be sufficient to lure any woman out of doors for a brisk walk. The hat is a smart model seen recently at the Ritz and is of black felt with a large twist of fawn colored velvet. This twist passes through the rolled brim after having crossed the top of the crown and is then turned back across the back of the hat to end in a looped "chou" over the right ear. The color of the velvet matched exactly the shade of the summer ermine which trimmed the wearer's black cloth coat.

THE COAT is a Chanel model made by her for the always sartorially smart Marquise de San Carlos. It is of heavy black velours de laine with cording on the cape over-sleeves and bolero and likewise at the belt line. Silver fox makes the large collar and also is used to trim the over-sleeves.

AMBRIDGE WARS ON REDS; 2 HELD

Accused of passing Communist literature to children as they left the Harmony School, Ambridge, a woman and a man were being held by Ambridge police. The girl was docketed as Edith Briscoe, 20, the man as Ed Shereclowski, 24, of 398 Spruce street, Ambridge.

The pair was arrested yesterday and were charged with violating a borough ordinance. Police said that further charges would likely be placed against the woman, as she is said to have broken the window of the car of Police Chief J. W. Flocker while being taken to the police station.

PRUDENCE PENNY'S RECIPES

LEMON TARTS. Prepare pie crust of a package of prepared crust from a package of pie dough. Cover tart shells with pricked paper and beans, beating 2 egg whites until light. Remove paper and beans and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) until golden brown. Let cool. Fill with a mixture of 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 cup water and 2 egg yolks. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. When blended add 1 tablespoon butter and ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Bake in 300-degree oven 10 to 12 minutes.

FRIED CEREAL. Prepare granular whole wheat cereal as for porridge, using a generous portion of cereal to insure firmness. Turn into a plain, round or square mold which has been previously dipped into cold water and chill. Unmold, cut into slices, roll in flour or brush over with beaten egg, then roll in uncooked cereal and saute in fat.

CHOCOLATE POP CORN—3 quarts popped corn, 1½ cups sugar, 1½ tablespoons butter, 1 square bitter chocolate.

Boil together the sugar, butter, chocolate and 3 tablespoons of water to 242 degrees or the soft ball stage. Pour while hot over the popped corn. Stir until all the kernels are coated. Care should be taken to see that the chocolate covering is neither too thick nor too thin. If it is too thin it soaks into the popped corn, and, if too thick, the popped corn becomes sticky and hard to eat. So remove it from the fire when the soft ball stage is reached.

HONEY FUDGE—1 square bitter chocolate, 2 cups sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup honey, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup nuts, 1 cup milk.

Melt chocolate over hot water. Add sugar, salt and milk and boil for 5 minutes. Add honey and cook to the soft ball stage. Set in pan of cold water and beat at once; when it begins to crystallize, add vanilla and nuts, turn quickly into a buttered pan. Makes 1½ pounds.

DATE NUT ROLL—Two and one-half cups sugar, 1 package of dates, 1 cup evaporated milk, 2 cups chopped nuts. Boil sugar and milk to soft ball stage. Add dates that have been washed, pitted and chopped and cook until dates soften and blend with the mixture, 236 degrees F. Add nuts and cool; then turn into pan and knead until creamy and stiff. Shape neatly into a roll. Wrap in a damp cloth and place in covered container until ready to slice.

Makes 1⅞ pounds.

LOBSTER COCKTAIL—Cut the meat from 2 cans of lobster into small pieces. Mix 2 tablespoons of catsup, 1 tablespoon horseradish, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon of chopped chives or olives, a teaspoon of salt and a dash of cayenne. Chill this mixture and ½ hour before serving pour it over the lobster. Serve cold in cocktail glasses, accompanied by a toasted wafer.

* * *

GRAHAM CRACKER CAKE WITH WHIPPED CREAM—Cream 6 tablespoons of butter, add ¾ of a cup of sugar and cream well. Add the beaten yolks of 2 eggs. Beat. Mix 3 teaspoons of baking powder, ½ teaspoon cinnamon with the finely rolled crumbs from 30 graham crackers. Add this alternately with 1 cup of milk. Lastly, fold in the beaten whites of 2 eggs and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Bake in 2 greased layer cake pans in a moderate oven. Bake 20 to 25 minutes. Put together with chocolate frosting and top with whipped cream.

Nuts Contain Same Food Value as Meat

Dr. Copeland lauds national nut-tree project of the American Forestry Association as productive of a rich harvest of this food which is rich in proteins and fat and should not be considered as a mere delicacy or confection.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City
United States Senator From New York

Here is an item of worth-while news. The Boy Scouts gathered heaps of hickory nuts and walnuts last fall for planting. This is a part of the national nut-tree project of the American Forestry Association.

The nuts were forwarded to Washington and will be planted in nursery beds by the Department of Agriculture. When the seedlings are ready the Boy Scouts all over the country will undertake to plant them. According to the project as planned, within a period of five years 5,000,000 nut trees will be added to the national wealth.

I read about this in an editorial printed in the Leader, published in Dexter, Mich. That is the paper I read every week, because it gives me the news of my native village. I recall with pleasure when I was the "printer's devil" in that office.

I fear we regard the nut merely as a delicacy, a sort of confection. It is far more than this. It is rich in protein and fat. As a matter of fact, the proteins of the nut are much like the proteins of fish and meat.

There is foundation for the practice of certain institutions in serving nut combinations as substitutes for meat. As you know, I never professed any enthusiasm for vegetarianism.

But it must be admitted at once that in nuts we find the valuable building and repair properties of good meat. Cheaper in price, the nuts possess much the same food value.

There are several delicious foods that are commonly considered to be indigestible. Among such we find cheese and nuts. I cannot accept the popular idea. Properly eaten they are readily digested.

When included as part of a well chosen meal, nuts make a comforting and health promoting addition. That is why I am glad the Boy Scouts are doing the fine thing, planting millions of nut trees to promote the welfare of future generations.

Are PRUNES Really Fruit?

FRUIT? It may come to you almost as a surprise. Especially if you have never seen prunes hanging plump and purple on the trees.

They're one of the most delicious of fruits, too. Wonderfully good . . . and good for you. Full of fine flavor, full of nutriment, full of good health.

But remember this: there is as much difference in prunes as in any fruit you buy. It's hard for you, however, to tell the difference just by looking at them. So we growers select the cream of our crop each season, pack the fruit in our own plant, label it with our own SUNSWEET Label, and offer it to you with our grower-guarantee of top quality.

Tender, thin-skinned, sugar-ripe, SUNSWEETS are one of California's finest fruit treats. One you can enjoy every day in the year.

Sealed in 1- and 2-lb. cartons to keep them fresh and clean.

Intelligence Necessity of Successful Marriage

Which if Cissy marry—Tom, Dick or Harry?

So far as she's concerned it seems to be a case of Eenie Meenie, Minie, Mo.

They're all so swell, she wails—"So lovable and considerate—so sweet to me, that I just can't decide!" So she wants us to shuffle the cards and pick her lottery ticket for her. Meanwhile until further notice she's letting each of 'em think he's got the inside track. Tune in on her broadcast and don't you dare to laugh!

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I have been a constant reader of your column for a long time, and I think you give such fair, sensible answers that I wonder if you can't help me solve a very important problem.

Can't Decide

"I am a young girl of 22 and I am considered prettier than the average girl by both sexes. And I am quite popular with both of them, too, in spite of my beauty.

"For some time now I have been going out with three different admirers, each of whom wants me to marry him. Each one of these fellows thinks he is the Only One . . . but Sally, I don't know myself which one I want to marry. And it has begun to get me on the jump, seeing all of them every day or so, and listening to their repeated proposals.

"It would be quite easy to decide, I suppose, if these fellows were so very different, one from the other. But they're not. They're all of them such swell fellows—so lovable and considerate and so sweet to me that I'm at a loss. I just can't make up my mind to decide between them.

"Let's call them Tom, Dick and Harry. Tom and Dick are both 25 years of age, good-looking, charming, personable. But—poor Harry isn't so good-looking, and he is 10 years older than I am, but he is immensely wealthy.

Fears Wrong Choice

"Now I like all three of these boys, but I am afraid to choose between them lest I may regret my choice and wish I had taken one of the others.

"I've known Tom for five years, and I really like him the best. Dick I respect more than the other two. I enjoy his company thoroughly. Harry, I like too. And I enjoy being with him . . . and then, of course, you'd suspect that his money is quite a magnetic part of him.

You may think this quite a childish letter for one claiming 22 years of life. But it isn't my age that influences this letter. It's just what I'm afraid lest I make the wrong choice. So please try and be square with me, and help me if possible.

"WONDERING CISSY.

So you think that's a real heavy problem, and you fear I'll dent my brain answering it? Don't worry, Cis. Any nitwit could answer that! Just flip a coin, then order the orange blossoms. For it won't matter a particle which man you choose.

You will make a mess of any marriage.

Because you'll never know what it's all about. You think marriage is a game of getting. And you're trying to pick a man from whom you can get most. But marriage is really a game of giving not getting.

Marriage isn't, as you think, a soft snap. Marriage is a job—the hardest job on earth. Marriage is an adventure—the most gallant but also the most grim. For there are jungles and deserts in the human spirit more dangerous than any in Africa. And just as you get out of a job or an adventure what you put into it, so you will get out of marriage what you put into it.

Serious Business

If you loaf at a job, if you whine over an adventure, your rewards will be very slim. But if you put courage and intelligence and loyalty and good humor into either job or adventure, it will pay you fat dividends. And the same goes for marriage.

It's a man-size test—is marriage. And only full-grown two-fisted humans should apply. Which leaves you out. You'll make a mess of any marriage, Cissy, because you aren't big enough for marriage yet. You're just an empty-headed, shallow-hearted little grabber. And since you have nothing to give to marriage, marriage will have nothing to give to you.

But they're madly in love with me!" you protest.

Don't kid yourself, sister. They're madly in love with what they think you are . . . with what they think you can mean to them . . . with what they think you'll do to their loves. And as soon as they discover that you're not a Glorious Dream, but only a Pain in the Neck, they're going to be off you like a dose of hives.

Snap out of it, kid! Stop thinking of yourself as a Prize Package and learn to be a regular human. Then maybe you'll qualify for some game bigger than pee-wee.

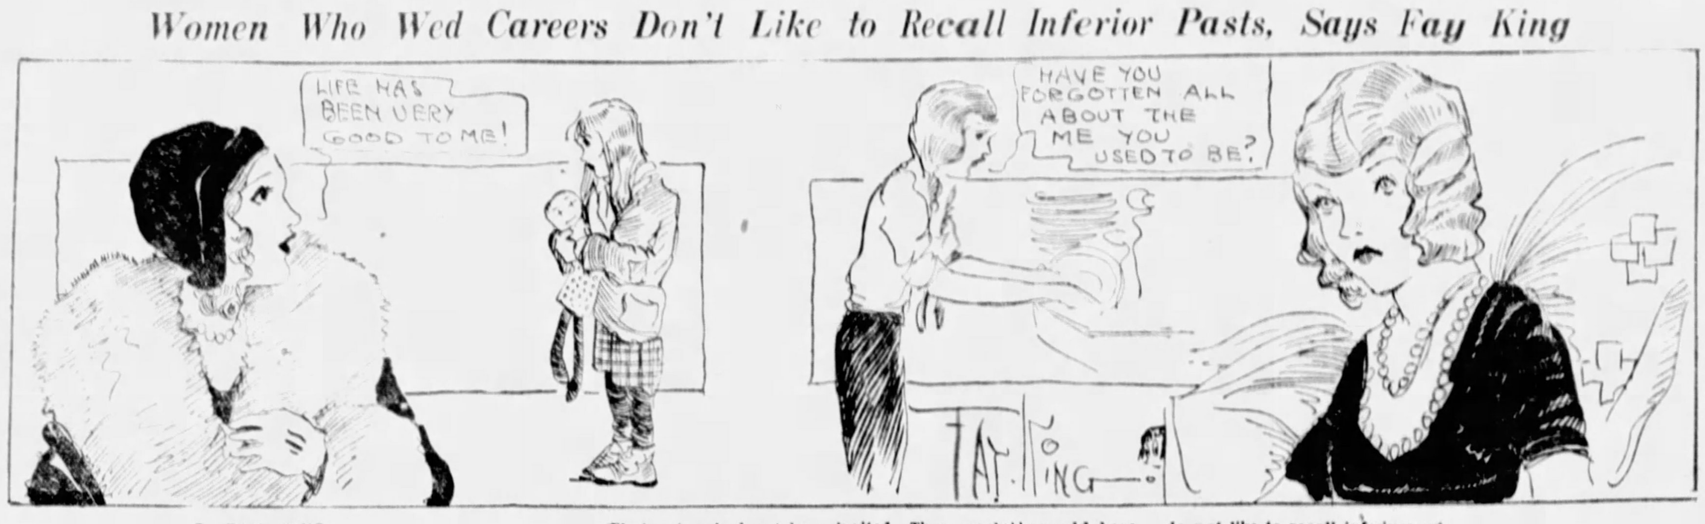
Women Who Wed Careers Don't Like to Recall Inferior Pasts, Says Fay King



By FAY KING

The most interesting affair I ever attended was a banquet to which my paper sent me.

Every successful man present had once been a poor little newsboy.

Their wives had not been invited. They probably would have put a damper upon the jolly reminiscences of former poverty and struggles so frankly told midst gales of laughter and with much pride.

Successful men always delight to recall humble beginnings.

But women who achieve success through careers or marriage do not like to recall inferior pasts.

That is why they are so often discontented.

When they climb to mink they sigh for sables.

Forgetting what they once did not have, they think only of the more someone else has, so seldom appreciating what they have.

Madge Senses Disapproving Note in Mrs. Brixton's Voice

I did not need even the "split second" so dear to certain writers of adventure stories to be convinced that there was a disapproving note in Helena Brixton's comment upon my announcement that our party was to be in Mary's honor. It might be a subconscious thought, but it had manifested itself and involuntarily my own voice sharpened as I answered her question.

"Very little older, really. But, of course, she has finished school preparatory and is . . ."

"She seemed much older to me," Mrs. Brixton said, and I was sure that she did not realize she had abruptly interrupted a sentence of mine. "But of course, that does not matter. The older young people will just have to put up with the school children."

"But there aren't any older young people," I said. "Mary is a stranger here and has kept so close to her studies that she has made no friends. The party isn't going to be a large one and, with the exception of Mary herself and your young men (two of them exceedingly youthful West Point cadets), the guests, except the chaperones, are in your house this morning."

"Oh!" she said again, and the note was distinctly stronger now. "How dear of you to do this for her! And now tell me all about it. When do you want us?"

"About 6 o'clock," I told her, trying to keep my voice cordial. "And, please, will you tell me the color of all your gowns—yours also, I mean. A friend of Mary's is sending corsage bouquets to every woman in the party."

"What a munificent person!" she laughed, but I jealously fancied that it was a bit forced. "What time must you have this information? They're all sound asleep."

"Ten o'clock." I returned. "Will they be awake then?"

"Oh, yes! They're going to ride in the park this morning, you know. But I want them to sleep until the last possible moment, for they were up late last night."

"Of course," I agreed. "I'll telephone you again at 10. Good-bye."

"Just a second," she interposed quickly. "As the party is for your niece, may I not keep Marion here until evening, so that she can come over with the crowd?"

"Mrs. Underwood is right here," I said, indefinably glad to close the colloquy. "I'll call her."

I gestured to Lillian, standing outside the booth, and she took the receiver from me, listened for a second and shot an involuntary glance at me before she answered.

"I won't be hard-hearted," she said in a voice perfectly audible to me, standing outside. "She may stay for lunch and she may come over with the crowd tonight. But I want her to come over to the hotel right after luncheon. I must take her shopping. She'll be back with you in plenty of time to dress for the party. All right? Fine! Goodby."

She came out of the booth and walked to the door with me before she spoke.

"Wait a second," she said, as I turned in the direction of the florist I wished to see about the decorations. "Don't walk so fast. Something's disturbing the convolutions of the old reliable bean. What did Helena spill that upset you?"

"How often have I told you that if you'd live two centuries ago they'd have burned you at the stake," I queried. "She didn't say anything to which any reasonable being could take exception."

"Well what did she say which might disturb an unreasonable being?" Lillian inquired with an impish side glance at me.

"She asked if Mary wasn't older than the rest, and something in her manner——" I hesitated.

"Made you suspect she disapproved of Mary," Lillian finished my sentence, then added one of her own. "And she does, so she does."

"Keep the blouse on!" Lillian admonished. "She hasn't a thing against Mary. In fact, she probably admires her tremendously. If it wasn't for this party thing she'd be strong for her."

"I don't understand," I said.

"No, not being the mother of a sub-deb, you can't," Lillian retorted. "It's subconscious maternal jealousy, that's all. Helena wants Carolyn to be the belle of the ball, and she knows very well that Mary's going to sweep everything before her."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Shingles, the Tired Man's Disease

One of the most annoying conditions that doctors encounter is the ailment called "shingles." It is extremely painful, obstinate and wearing. It is quite disabling when affecting old people.

Dr. Copeland.

This disease is usually found in elderly people, but may occur in young adults and children. It is quite rare in persons of middle age.

Fever is the first conspicuous sign. This is soon followed by a localized skin disturbance. The eruption consists of a group of small blisters, each about the size of a small pea. The skin surrounding these blisters becomes inflamed.

The blisters may form anywhere on the body, but usually they follow the course of a nerve. They appear most commonly on the abdomen, chest, neck, shoulders or arms.

Pain is always present in shingles. It may be slight, or so severe as to prevent sleep. The pain is usually described as darting, burning, drawing or tugging.

An acute attack may last from one week to as long as six weeks. In old and feeble individuals shingles may last for months and even for years.

The disease has two redeeming features: In children the pain is usually slight or entirely absent. Secondly, shingles seldom occur twice in the same individual.

The exact cause of shingles is not known, though it is believed to be due to an infection. Atmospheric changes, exposure to cold and wet, commonly bring on the attack. The disease is believed by some to be a sign of a rundown or fatigued condition. I often speak of it as the tired man's or tired woman's disease.

The treatment is essentially local: Care must be taken to protect the parts involved from injury and infection. This is accomplished by daily dressings with antiseptics and soothing lotions.

The disease is rarely dangerous to life. Occasionally it is followed by persistent neuralgic pains. This is particularly common when occurring in the aged.

Involvement of the eye is a serious, but rare complication. When this happens the best of skill is demanded in the treatment.

It is always best to consult a physician, so that all the necessary precautions should be taken. His advice will lessen the pain and danger of complications.

Household Hints

All hats should be brushed before and after each wearing, this being particularly true of velvet hats. Nothing looks so untidy as dusty or soiled headgear, yet these days we see much of it.

Before purchasing material for a suit or coat, inquire if it has been sponged. If it has not been sponged every spot of water will show and if caught in a shower the garment is liable to shrink.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Whatever affects the central nervous system, affects the health, gloss and beauty of the hair. Poor circulation is tough on the glorious crown; it lives on the blood supply. Some day we won't put hair tonics on our scalps; we'll eat them, just as babies are made to eat certain foods containing chemical elements to grow strong bones. Hair is benefitted by a weekly shampoo, and it is grateful for a five-minute friction of the scalp every day.

Do you cup the side of your face in your lily white hand when you sleep? Don't do it. It creates fine furrows around the eyes. High pillows are bad; they dig lines in the neck. Lying on the back, with the head resting on a high pillow is a position that throws the chin downward, forming a crosswise gully that is the forerunner of a chin that will eventually go double. The low cushion tilts the chin upward, making for its musculatory health and helping it to retain the firm surface of youth.

No sense asking "Where are the beauties of yester-year?" Women have better figures, finer complexions, healthier hair than they have ever had. One seldom sees a really poor complexion. Advancement in pulchritude is due to general enlightenment in hygiene—proper eating, greater interest in outdoor exercise, daily bathing, faithfulness to the use of harmless cosmetics.

To acquire that lovely sweeping line from the southern point of the ribs down to the knee—you see it on the ladies that the fashion artists draw and sometimes on flesh-and-blood beauties—you must make yourself tall and make yourself long. Take up slack in the backbone, so there is no chance of the chest sinking, hips plunging forward or tummy tissues being on the bulge. Get long by stretching night and morning and keep tall by constant regard for posture. 'Tisn't the clothes a gal wears that makes her distinguished as much as the way she wears them.

Correct Manners

By L. S. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Addressing the Sisters

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Can a second or third girl of a family be addressed as "Miss" until the older sister is married? One person stated that the older girl is termed "Miss Smith," while her younger sister, Helen, is just "Helen Smith." The older Miss Smith marries, then Helen is "Miss Helen Smith." Is that correct?

ALICIA.

No, this is not correct. The oldest daughter of the family is Miss Smith, although she may, if she chooses, be called Miss Mary Smith, even on her visiting cards. Her next younger sister is Miss Helen Smith—also this on her visiting cards. And an even younger sister is Miss Agatha Smith. I think that you mean that a younger sister may not be Miss Smith, and this is true. Only the oldest sister may be Miss Smith, but the others would, formally, always use their title of Miss, with the first name. For instance, as well as on their visiting cards, when they sign a hotel register.

Letter of Regret

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received an invitation to an out-of-town wedding which I shall be unable to attend. I should appreciate your advice as to whom to send the letter of regret. To the parents of the bride-to-be? And what form of letter to write?

MISS BLANK.

In your question you do not state what form of invitation you received and to what it invites you. If, for instance, the invitation is to the church ceremony only, it is not necessary to acknowledge it. Such an invitation reads: "requests the honor of your presence" and needs not be answered.

If, however, the invitation is formal and includes, besides the invitation to the ceremony at the church, an invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast, you answer it formally, that is in the third person. Like this:

Miss Mary Blank regrets very much that she is unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. Bride's Parents' kind invitation for Monday, the first of February.

On the other hand, if the invitation is informal, that is, in the form of a letter, you answer it in the form of a letter.

The answer should be addressed to the mother and father of the bride, who issue the invitations.

Don't Ask for His Fraternity Pin or Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it considered proper for a girl to ask a boy for his ring or fraternity pin when it is not to be taken in the old sense? That is, it is not to be considered as an engagement? Especially when he shows and explains every detail of it as if he would like to ask the girl to wear it, but hasn't the nerve. M. G.

From time immemorial women have attributed man's notwishing to his "lack of nerve," but, lady, it isn't so! If this boy wishes to give this girl his ring or his fraternity pin, he will find a way to do it, be sure of that, no matter how "shy" he is, no matter how little "nerve" he has. This is one of the things that a wise woman learns very early in life, and the wiser she is, the younger she learns it. . . . and I do not mean this "wise" in an unattractive sense. I mean that she has a clear vision on this sort of thing.

This girl will be foolish indeed if she asks this boy for his ring or fraternity pin.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Saturday, February 7

The astrological prospects for this day point to some variable conditions according to afflicting lunar aspects. While the luminaries are in excellent position for fortifying employment, advancement and personal preferments and dignities, yet there are hints of deception, fraud and irregularities as well as stubborn obstructions to the attainment of desires and ambitions.

Those who birthday it is stand at the brink of a conflicting year which holds promise of advancement, preferment and favors from employers, elders or those in high places. Nevertheless, there may be difficult obstacles to overcome and there is menace of fraud and trickery to be dealt with.

A child born on this day may have many talents and ambitions, but may need to be well trained and educated to surmount stubborn obstacles.

recommendations direct to me from time to time.

Asks for Chaplains

Bishop Gwynne, of the British forces, explained their system, the methods of administration and the control and direction of chaplain's work, from which we adopted such features as were applicable to our service.

Custom in our army, arising from lack of appreciation of the usefulness of chaplains, had relegated them as a class to the status of handy men who were detailed to write up boards of survey or run libraries.

In recommending the increase of chaplains, I sent the Secretary of War the following cablegram January 17, 1918:

"In the fulfillment of its duty to the nation much is expected of our army and nothing should be left undone that will help in keeping it in the highest state of efficiency.

"I believe the personnel of the army has never been equaled and the conduct has been excellent, but to overcome entirely the conditions found here requires fortitude born of great moral courage and lofty spiritual ideals.

"Counting myself responsible for the welfare of our men in every respect, it is my desire to surround them with the best influences possible. In the fulfillment of this solemn trust, it seems wise to request the aid of churchmen from home. To this end it is recommended that the number of chaplains in the army be increased for the war to an average of three per regiment.

". . . Men selected should be of the highest character with reputations well established as sensible, practical, active ministers or workers, accustomed to dealing with young men . . ."

This recommendation was approved by the Secretary of War and later enacted into law.

Aviation Difficulties

Aviation questions demanded unremitting attention, for in no other service was unpreparedness so evident and so difficult to overcome. Apparently there was earnest effort at home, but it was too often misdirected.

The manufacture of planes was very uncertain, partly because of indecision as to types and largely through inexperience in construction. In the A. E. F., difference of opinion and the consequent lack of co-operation among aviation officers upon whom rested the task of organization and training caused confusion and loss of time.

On the part of the Allies, especially the French, lack of mechanics and delay in procuring motors and material, such as spruce, had given them a setback. Due to these conditions and their own increased programs the French and also the Italians were unable to take more than a small proportion of our 1,500 flying cadets who were on the ground and who, under agreement, were to be instructed by them.

About this time the contract for planes we had made in August was formally abrogated, the French government being unable to meet its conditions due to the delay in receipt of machine tools and raw materials from the United States, a possibility which had been forecast in my cables to the War Department.

In its stead we later made an agreement whereby we should be dependent upon the allotment that might be made us according to the number of divisions we might have in France.

It developed a few days later in conversation with Gen. Petain that he had much to do with the decision of the Minister of Munitions regarding airplanes for us. The French airplane program at the front was then being greatly enlarged due to the increased air activity on the part of the Germans.

Petain Intervenes

It also appeared that after three years and a half of war the combined aircraft production capacity of the Allies was behind that of the Germans. Petain was afraid that his armies might run short of planes and had intervened.

Petain realized our situation, but said that it was necessary to consider the needs of his aviation, which was actually employed, before making provision for us. He thought that by the time we should be ready to put our troops in line the rate of production could be increased so that we might have our due proportion.

It was my contention that the French manufacturers should be allowed to fulfill their contract with us so that our aviation would be available for service with the French armies. But Petain thought the manufacturers had undertaken more than they could do and that the output should be held as available where most needed.

Thus it was impossible to obtain assurance of any fixed number of planes until later on when the necessity for the assistance of our aviation became urgent.

Early in December I signed an agreement with Lord Northcliffe, of the British Air Board, that we should send 15,000 enlisted men to England and maintain that number in training in their aircraft factories and air service stations.

This plan proved to be beneficial to both sides, as far as carried out, but especially to ourselves, in providing us with trained men and saving us the necessity of establishing extra schools for teaching them ourselves. Due to the non-shipment of air personnel from home we lacked 4,500 of reaching the number specified, and later the need for line troops prevented our completing the number.

BISHOP CHARLES E. BRENT
Bishop Brent, to whose views Pershing deferred in France.

When Gen. Robertson came for the conference regarding the shipment of troops for training with the British as mentioned in my diary, we began to discuss the details of the disposition to be made of our forces which might be brought over in British shipping.

Gen. Robertson

It was found that Gen. Robertson's proposal was practically the same as the one submitted to Mr. E. M. House through Mr. Lloyd George. He wanted to bring our infantry and machine gun units by battalions only and pointed out how much more expeditiously this would meet the shortage of men in the British army than to ship whole divisions with all their equipment and stores.

He said he did not wish to interfere with our program of building up an independent army, but thought that if we would agree to let them have as many as 100,000 or 150,000 men in addition to the complete divisions necessary for our army they could find the shipping to carry them.

He believed that the British government would take the risk of releasing temporarily some shipping engaged in carrying food and raw materials if America could see her way to provide the men, although, he said, it could not well undertake the transportation of complete divisions as not enough men would be brought over in this manner to justify the great risks involved. In other words, the British had the shipping to transport American battalions on conditions that they would serve in the British armies.

Wanted Advantage

The question of drafting our men as individuals was mentioned, but the difficulties of discipline and the total loss of their identity were considered insuperable objections. The British really proposed two plans; one, suggested by Gen. Robertson, which contemplated that our battalions should go into their divisions and be absorbed, and the other, by Field Marshal Haig, under which they should go in successively until the selected British units should become American.

Gen. Robertson said that unless we could furnish man power to build up their divisions there was the possibility of the British reaching such an exhausted condition by the severe fighting in prospect that the Allies would have a very heavy task in winning the war.

The arguments Gen. Robertson advanced clearly indicated that the British were playing for advantage to themselves in offering to transport our troops; that is, their purpose was to build up their own units instead of aiding the cause by augmenting the number of complete combat divisions on the Western Front.

The question that naturally arose in my mind was that if tonnage was available for this purpose, why had it not been offered to us some time before, or, indeed, why not at that very moment. If it had been, we could have brought several more divisions to France and had them prepared to go into the line much earlier than was eventually possible.

Met Disasters

It is conceivable that they might have been able to prevent the disasters that came to the British in March and to the French in May. But, of course, the offer was made primarily in order to build up their units with Americans. The British were not thinking in terms of an American army at all.

However, as Gen. Robertson's proposal would enable us to increase our strength more rapidly, my preliminary cable to Washington reporting the conference recommended that it be given consideration and, in view of our national attitude regarding service with another army, that if approved the plan should be regarded as a temporary measure to meet an emergency; that as soon as possible the remaining troops of our divisions thus temporarily broken up should be brought over and the units reassembled; that division, brigade and regimental commanders and their staffs be sent with their infantry for training with the corresponding British units, and that the infantry be taken from those divisions that would not otherwise be transported until after June.

The arrangement proposed by Robertson, if adopted, was not to interfere in any way with our program for bringing our troops in our own tonnage as already planned. My cable suggested that we should insist that the British government continue to provide as many men for their armies as possible, and that it would be pertinent for our government to inquire just what the British government proposed to do to keep up its own forces.

British Man Power

I feared that should we make this concession the tendency would be for them to relax and let the burden of keeping up their man power fall on us, to the detriment of preparations for building up our own army later on.

In a telegram to Gen. Robertson later, I set forth the report of our conversation which I had cabled the War Department and further stated that it was of the utmost importance that the British government should exert every energy to keep up its own man power.

I requested a full statement from him as to British resources, including the men then available and to become so during the war, in order that we might have all the facts available before making a final decision on his proposition.

In reply, Gen. Robertson sent me the following data in a letter dated January 17:

"The British government has given the most anxious consideration to the question of the maintenance of the armies in the field during 1918 and, by making every effort, there will become available for service at the front 449,000 men now under training, plus 160,000 to be called up. In addition there will be called up 100,000 men of lower category who are not fit for the first line, plus 120,000 lads of 18 years of age, who will not be available for service at the front till 1919. Please keep these figures strictly secret."

Nothing further was done toward an agreement until a week or so later, when conversations were resumed.

University officials said the disagreements arose over new appointments to the department. Increases in opportunity and salary were cited by university authorities as factors in the decisions of the instructors.

NOTRE DAME DROPS HANLEY ON FLUNK

ON THE GRIDIRON itself, Notre Dame's football stars have not been defeated in two years. Off the field, they have not been so fortunate. It's there that their losses have been suffered, losses which must have impressed upon them the fact that the South Bend university has higher objects than the mere athletic prestige which goes with the winning of football games. Last season it was Joe Savoldi, the country's greatest fullback, who was made to withdraw from school on account of a secret marriage and subsequent action for divorce, and now the team has met with another heavy loss that will add to its difficulties next fall in drawing out the present string of 19 consecutive victories.

Dan Hanley

It is again at the fullback post that the Irish are hit. Dan Hanley who had been scheduled to succeed Savoldi and Moon Mullins at that important position as the regular for the 1931 season, has been dropped from college for failure to make the required marks in the mid-year examinations and will not be available when Coach Knute Rockne starts to make over his machine.

HANLEY WAS NOT the only player lost in that way. Frank Butler, burly reserve center who stands 6 feet 2 inches and weighs 202 pounds and who had been counted upon to give good service as substitute for Capt. Tom Yarr, also flunked out of college in the recent exams and will be missed by the shock troops.

The loss of Hanley is the really hard blow, however. Rockne had planned to keep him out of varsity competition during his sophomore year, but made him substitute for Mullins when Savoldi left school, and during the remainder of the season the Montana line-ripper made such a splendid impression that his future looked bright and it was generally predicted he would be a real star as a regular in 1931 and 1932. Now it will be necessary to develop a new man to fill the big hole at fullback, and it may be no easy job, even for such a master builder as the great Norwegian.

THE FULLBACK POSITION on Notre Dame grid teams has figured in more misfortune and caused more trouble than any other in the lineup. The most notable early instances were the shift of Pete Vaughn to Princeton and the death of George Gipp.

A broken leg put Paul Castner out of commission. Even in Four Horsemen year, an injury kept Elmer Layden on the shelf for a time. Joe Savoldi was dropped in mid-season last year. Moon Mullins, who succeeded him as a regular fullback, was lost for the important Southern California game on account of a damaged knee, and now Hanley, who was to have succeeded Mullins, has flunked out of school with two years to go.

CARNEGIE TECH'S RETURN football game with Purdue in 1932, following Purdue's appearance here next fall, may be played in Cleveland municipal stadium instead of in Lafayette, Ind., where Purdue is located. Nobel Kizer, Boilermaker coach, inspected the Cleveland stadium the other day and was so favorably impressed by the possibilities of the growing city bowl that he said he would try to make arrangements to have the Carnegie-Purdue game in 1932 played there. He will come to Pittsburgh next week to urge the Carnegie Tech officials to consent to the proposal. He says the Western Conference will not object so long as the ticket sale and other business details are handled by the two schools.

Dutch Henry

THE RELEASE OF Pitcher Frank (Dutch) Henry by the White Sox to Minneapolis in the American Association has killed whatever possibility there might have been that Henry would set a new record for consecutive defeats suffered by a major league slabman.

Hurling for the White Sox last year, Henry lost 13 games in a row. He won only two decisions all season while losing 17, and never won a game after June 7. In his run of 13 consecutive defeats he was beaten by every other club in the American League.

IN HIS RUN of defeats, Henry was six short of the old record and seven short of a new one. Burleigh Grimes had a similar stretch of 13 while with the Pirates in 1917.

The record for successive reverses in the big show is 19, set by Fred Bates of the Cleveland Nationals in 1899 and equaled by John Nabors of the Philadelphia Americans in 1916. Singularly, the record of consecutive victories is the same. Tim Keefe won 19 games in a row for the Giants in 1888 and Rube Marquard tied the mark for the same club in 1912.

A FEW YEARS ago such automobile speed as 245.733 miles per hour would have been considered impossible, yet, in setting that new world record at Daytona Beach yesterday, Capt. Malcolm Campbell says he was disappointed. Though he surpassed by 14.371 miles per hour the former record, which the late Sir Henry Segrave set at 231.362 on the same track in 1929, the 46-year-old British racing driver says he is not satisfied and could have done much better but for poor visibility and the unevenness of the beach. The general opinion is that even as things stand, the Captain has set a speed record that will hang around for a day or two, unless he breaks it himself with his present car, the 1,450 horsepower Bluebird II.

THE AVERAGE CITIZEN may ask what is to be gained by these astounding speed performances and question whether the glory is worth the great risk involved, but Capt. Campbell himself feels that he is doing something very definite, something very progressive for motordom when he drives at this terrific rate.

"The race track is the automobile laboratory," he explains. "You can learn certain things about a motor and about tires only by putting them to the ultimate test. Five years ago there wasn't an automobile tire made that would stand a speed of 200 miles an hour. Mine are tested for 300 and they might stand more."

CAPT. CAMPBELL has been driving racing machines of one kind or another ever since 1905, when he won his first gold speed medal in a motorcycle race in England. In 1909 he built an airplane and flew it. He served in the Royal Flying Corps during the World War. His best previous automobile record was 207 miles an hour, made at Daytona Beach in 1908.

George Kelly

The first man in the world to attain a land speed of four miles per minute, Capt. Campbell also is the only man living who has driven an automobile faster than 200 miles an hour. Three others did it, but all of them are dead. They were Sir Henry Segrave, Ray Keech and Frank Lockhart.

ADD ONE MORE to the list of familiar figures leaving the big baseball leagues. George Kelly, veteran first baseman, is to pass out again as soon as the Cubs can get waivers on him. The Bruins brought Long George back to the big show from Minneapolis last year to fill the first-base breach when Grimm was injured, but he is needed no longer and will be cast adrift. He will become a free agent. Los Angeles wants him but he prefers to play in the East or Middle West. The decision to drop Kelly probably means that Charley Grimm, after all, will again play first base for the Cubs unless the Cards reduce the price on Jim Bottomley to figures which the Chicago club is willing to pay.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

If some earnest and vigorous coaching to which they have been exposed this week bears fruit, the Yellow Jackets will be in the lead at the finish of the first period of their International League hockey game with the Syracuse Stars at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night.

In a majority of their battles this season, the local puckmen have been slow in becoming aroused and have permitted their foemen to gain an edge of a goal or more in the initial stanza. Sensational rallies have enabled the Jackets to erase first-period handicaps in many engagements, but in others they have been unable to make up ground lost through slow starts.

AIM AT FAST START

In the drills this week Coach Charles Reid and Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the Pittsburgh club, have stressed the importance of starting with a rush. It is very seldom that the Jackets are outplayed in the second and third periods, after a few sound smacks by opponents have brought their fighting spirit to the surface. Schooley and Reid want their stalwarts to start battling before being stung, for too often the enemy's sting is represented by a goal.

Although the Jackets have gained three wins and a tie in four clashes with the Stars, they have occasion to regard the New York staters as dangerous foemen. Syracuse has shown at its best when opposed to the league's stronger members, and the skirmish here tomorrow is likely to be productive of fast, hard milling.

The Schooley skaters are to meet the Indians in Cleveland there Sunday and here next Tuesday. Triumphs in their next three games will steamroller many of the rough spots out of the locals' steep path to a play-off berth.

CONTROL FIGHT DENIED

Roy D. Schooley, president, and Attorney James F. Callahan, secretary and treasurer of the local International League Hockey Club, principals in a reported sensational battle for control of the Yellow Jackets, today agreed that there had been and would be no contest for control of the club, and that the only activity among officials of the club had been a transfer of stock.

Attorney Callahan said that he recently sought to purchase Schooley's interest in the club, and that the Jackets' president countered by offering to buy his interest. Schooley's price was very fair, Attorney Callahan said, and so he accepted the offer and put through the stock transfer as an ordinary business deal, rather than as a climax to a "battle for control of the club," as erroneously reported. Negotiations for transfer of the stock, begun Tuesday, were concluded today.

NO CHANGE, NONE EXPECTED

Schooley and Callahan further agreed that the business deal had been accorded attention all out of proportion to its importance. Schooley always has been head of the club and his authority never has been questioned, the club president and Attorney Callahan pointed out today, and neither was able to understand why a report that a change never anticipated was not to be made should be regarded as one of a sensational nature.

DURIS BEATS M'ARTHUR

Mickey Duris, rugged Johnstown lightweight, all but knocked out Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, last night in their 10-round main bout at the Palisades Arena, in the Tube City, winning all the way and climaxing his exhibition by flooring McArthur three times in the final round. Throughout the bout, Duris was the more aggressive, landing effectively in every round with a stiff right and a hard left hook that did McArthur little good.

In the fifth and sixth rounds, McArthur displayed real form and he earned draws in these sessions.

The scheduled eight-round semi-final bout between Buddy McArthur, a brother of the main-bout loser, and Paul Rinsko, of Monessen, was stopped in the sixth round because of a severe nose injury to Rinsko, McArthur being credited with a technical kayo victory.

Hans Roberts, of Brookline, took a neat boxing lesson from Marty Gornick, of McKeesport, in the second bout of six rounds, losing every round. Gornick weighed 137½ against 144 for Roberts.

Sammy Burns, local Hill district Negro, won on a technical knockout over Flick Ryan, of Ellsworth, in the second round of the opener. Referee Red Robinson stopping the bout to save Ryan from unnecessary punishment. Ryan weighed 120¾, and Burns

BIG MEETING AT ALCOMA

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

It is anticipated about 150 members of the Alcoma Country Club will attend the get-together friendship meeting in the Franks-town road club house, beginning at 6:45 tonight. President Thomas Nichols and the committee in charge have outlined a splendid program.

Feature of the evening's entertainment will be the presentation to Vance D. M. Smith of the Armstrong County Trophy, which he won last fall by scoring a 74 net in a tourney held for that purpose. If the weather man continues to be kind, golf this afternoon will precede this evening's festivities.

The committees:

Stanley Currie, who works with Jock Kennedy, pro at the Fox Chapel Golf Club, has taken over the golf net in the Plaza, and from now until spring will be giving lessons there. The net, a large and spacious one, is being run in conjunction with an indoor course.

Pete O'Hara, of the Westmoreland County Club, has opened an indoor golf course in the Regent Building, at 117 North Highland avenue.

Thursday night has been set by the Shannopin Country Club as men's night with auction and contract bridge holding the limelight. The first session will be held next week.

BLUEFIELD VICTOR

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Bluefield College humbled a visiting five from Fairmont Normal last night by the score of 52 to 45.

SPORT VIGNETTES

How's this for sustained crashing of bat and ball, from a Detroit newspaper: "Throughout the afternoon the crashing of bats against baseballs was like a tonic to the species of fans that like to see the leather get a ride, and, in the ninth inning, it was still echoing around the place." . . . At the rate the campaign against overemphasis in college athletics is progressing, it looks as if we'll have to have one against underemphasis in 10 or 15 years . . . At that, it will be refreshing to have the president instead of the football coach of Old Penn explain away those football defeats next fall.

Believe it or not, but the name of the manager of Stanley Poredo, the young heavyweight of Jersey City, is Billy Reppenhagen . . . Benny Touchstone received only 15 per cent of a $345 gate when he knocked out Frank Novak at McKeesport recently, but he took his short purse with a smile . . . "We all have to take it on the chin when we get a house like this," was his comment to Promoter Jim McGirr, who, considering the many slim gates he has laughed off, takes the palm as the gamest impresario in the district.

The most revolutionary changes in the boxing rules are those made by the new California commission, headed by Bob Edgren, which was ushered into office to "clean up" the sport on the Coast . . . New York is all agog over the fact that the once lowly wrestlers are selling out Madison Square Garden show after show while the leading boxers can't even draw out a corporal's guard.

Ted Yarosz, the undefeated welterweight, of Monaca, wants to fight the better type of opponents, such as Joe Trippe, Bucky Lawless, Paul Pirrone, Vincent Hambright, Tommy Freeman and others in his class. . . . He believes he could be developed into a good drawing card against foes of this variety rather than those he has been called upon to face in local rings, and his record certainly entitles him to the opportunity.

The major league magnates denied that the lively hitting was due to the lively ball and they confirm their denials now by substituting a less lively rocket for the coming season in the National League. . . . That's getting out of a tough hole, as the infielder said to the pitcher who had just laid one in the groove for Babe Ruth with the bases full. . . . The real name of Walter Cobb, the 220-pound heavyweight, of Baltimore, who boxes on the Loughran-Baer card in New York tonight, is Walker Ritch. . . . He hoboed his way from a farm in Missouri to Baltimore to set himself up as a fistician a year or so ago. . . . Leonard Simon, who formerly boxed around here under the name of Johnny McCoy, and now is traveling out of Buffalo for an Ohio concern, is the proud papa of a youngster born last Sunday night. . . . It's a boy—HARRY KECK.

MURPHY SOUGHT

Local police today are attempting to get in touch with Thomas Edward Murphy, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., baseball coach and scout, who left his home to come to Pittsburgh about a week ago. Murphy's mother suffered a stroke yesterday, and is reported to be in a critical condition. His prompt return to Wilkes-Barre is sought.

HANDBALL PLAY CARDED

The annual A. M. A. Junior handball championships will get under way next Monday at 1 p. m. on the courts of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. Entries close tomorrow night.

JUDGE LANDIS DEFENDANT

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis' side of the question in an injunction suit brought by the Milwaukee club, of the American Association, was due today for presentation in the court of Federal Judge Lindley—the same court in which Landis once handed down decisions.

The case is listed as a petition for injunction to restrain Landis, as commissioner of baseball, from preventing the St. Louis club, of the American League, in its efforts to send Outfielder Fred Bennett to the Milwaukee American Association club, a St. Louis "farm." It is considered, however, as a challenge to Landis' dictatorship over organized baseball.

Yesterday's hearing was devoted to listening to the case of the plaintiff, during which officials of the Milwaukee and St. Louis clubs asserted the commissioner had overstepped his authority by interferring with the movements of the player.

Landis did not appear in court, but was represented by Attorney George Miller and his secretary, L. L. O'Connor.

Seats Available For Pitt, Irish Floor Clash

Pitt athletic authorities today announced that reserved and general admission seats still were available for tomorrow night's battle between the Panther passers and the Irish, of Notre Dame, in the Stadium pavilion.

The announcement was made to offset reports that all tickets for the contest have been sold. The game is expected to pack the floor to capacity.

BLUFFMEN MAY FIND FOE TOO TOUGH

The Lineup

By JESS CARVER.

Having very successfully hurdled the bristling obstacle set in its comeback path Wednesday by Grove City, Geneva College's varsity basketballers make their first appearance of the season in Pittsburgh tonight, stacking up against Duquesne on the Bluff court.

Tonight's contest affords the Dukes their first opportunity for action since January 16, when Georgetown was met and conquered in Washington. Westminster's sudden cancellation of its game with the Dukes knocked the locals out of action for an extra long period.

The loss of the games with Westminster cost Duquesne two of its most attractive contests, but it's still an ill wind that blows nobody good, and, so, the annual appearance of the Covenanters here becomes the piece de resistance of the Bluffite home card.

LAYOFF COSTLY

Duquesne may suffer somewhat by the enforced layoff, and may find in Geneva a foe too tough to be trimmed. Geneva started slowly, but has snapped into it with a vengeance these past weeks. The Beaver Falls chaps riddled the Grovers on their own floor to start the week.

Bunk McGeever, Chick Davies' big center, one of the best in the section, will have a scrap on his hands tonight. He'll be playing this fellow Sole, who lays no claim to being a great basketball player or a great center, but is one of these babies who goes in there, and on sheer courage and fight, makes it very tough for any opponent. He gave big Harry Brownlee, Westminster's towering pivot man, all the ball game he wanted the night Geneva laced the United Presbyterians.

LINEUPS SET

The regular lineups, those which have started most of the games for the two rivals so far, figure to stand tonight. Benedict and Abele will be at the forwards, with McGeever at center and Capt. Brud Stephens and Parry at the guards. For Geneva, Fair and Manning are expected to start at forwards, Sole at center and clever Cliff Aultman and Cappy Montgomery at the guards.

In a preliminary game, the sensational and unbeaten Duke freshmen will tackle Dormont High.

CARLSON O. K.

Everything is reported lovely along the Pitt front, and Doc Carlson, bum lamps or no bum lamps, will be on the bench tomorrow night to direct the play of his Panthers in their return battle with Notre Dame.

The Braddock medico, who has been confined to his home with an eye infection, which resulted from an abscessed tooth, was given a thorough examination today by Dr. L. M. Mitchell. Dr. Mitchell decided to permit the peppery mentor to adorn a portion of the bench tomorrow night.

Carlson's ailment was so serious that he was forbidden to accompany his team to Washington for the game with Wash-Jeff Tuesday night.

SCHNUPP TOO

Lenny Schnupp, Carnegie Tech's giant tackle, is resting as quietly as a chap like Len ever will rest, following an operation for the removal of his appendix in Presbyterian Hospital yesterday.

Dr. H. R. Decker performed the operation, which was completed under a spinal anesthetic.

Two Knockouts In Amateur Bouts

George Frans and Perry Peprach suffered knockout defeats in amature bouts staged at St. Boniface Lyceum, North Side, last night. The summary:

118-pound class—Ernie Gaydos, Woods Run Settlement, defeated Andy Smith, Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., in three rounds.

135-pound class—Gene Judge, St. Boniface, knocked out Perry Peprach, Twenty-third Ward A. C., in the second round. John Walters, Sharpsburg A. C., defeated Nick Pritchard, Pittsburgh Lyceum, in three rounds.

175-pound class—Steve Tarzan Liben, St. Boniface, defeated Butch Jacobs, Hogan A. C., in three rounds.

At New York—Eddie (Kid) Whalen knocked out Billy Franklin, 5 rounds; Chester Matan knocked out Owen Flynn, 1 round; Jimmy Slavin defeated Frankie Marino, 10 rounds.

At Paterson, N. J.—Jackie Shupack defeated Harry Kohn, 8 rounds.

The boys in the City League hop to the playing of their first second round tussles today with great gusto, full schedules being slated for both sections. The same goes for the three divisions of the Junior League, and in the W. P. I. A. L., where some divisions opened their second round campaign with contests Tuesday, all 16 sections resume action.

Both first half leaders, Westinghouse, in Section I, and Allegheny, in Section II, will play this afternoon. John Irwin's Taylor Allderdice quintet will invade the Brushton floor to meet the unbeaten Silver Lakers, who romped through the first half of the race by scoring six consecutive triumphs.

In Section II, Allegheny expects little difficulty in defeating Carrick.

FIFTH, SCHENLEY CLASH

Other Section I games include the Fifth-Schenley clash at Schenley, the feature battle of the day, and the Connelley-South tussle at South. In Section II, South Hills meets Oliver at Oliver and Vocational and Langley clash at Langley.

Hay must be made by one or two of the W. P. I. A. L. favorites who took unexpected thumpings Tuesday. Homestead, defeated by Clairton in an upset battle in Section VII, plays Munhall at Munhall. Bill Campbell's passers were riding along with all serene, apparently, until Clairton, which had won only one game before, knocked 'em off.

In Section IX, Mt. Lebanon surprised McKees Rocks by turning the Rox quintet back and tonight the Carnegie quintet, a formidable entry, invades the Rox floor. Mt. Lebanon's victory Tuesday threw the sectional race into a three-way tie, between itself, McKees Rocks and Carnegie. Tonight Mt. Lebanon plays at Coraopolis.

Ed Paulie's Swissvale stars, defending their sectional championship, was beaten by Wilkinsburg Tuesday and wound up in a tie for the lead. Tonight Swissvale takes on Verona and, with Wilkinsburg idle, can regain the advantage held prior to Tuesday for the time being.

Mrs. Sterrett, champion of the tournament in 1927 and 1929, had a medal score of 87 as she led favorites in their progress from the quarter finals. She sank a five-foot putt at the eighteenth green.

Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, who took medal honors with a brilliant sub-par 78, had an easy time winning, 8 and 7, from Mrs. Joseph Lawlor, White Plains, N. Y.

WHEN THE NOW FAMOUS NOTRE DAME COACH (ARROW) WAS A CHECKER AT OHIO RESORT HOTEL

Almost 17 years ago, a group of young men of the South Side went to Cedar Point, O., to work in the Breakers' Hotel during the summer months, and there encountered Knute Rockne, a member of the Notre Dame football team, who was employed in the same place as a checker in the dining room, earning money during the vacation period to continue his studies. With him were other members of the Irish squad, then not as famous as its successors were to become. They were employed as waiters. During a moment of recreation the above picture was taken, and it has just come to light in possession of one of the local men.

Left to right in the group are John Lewis, of the South Side; Ed Moritz, of the South Side; Gus Dorais, who played end at Notre Dame and was on the receiving end of many of Rockne's passes (he now coaches at Detroit University; (?) believed to be another Notre Dame player; Knute Rockne; (?) believed to be another Notre Dame player; William Geltzheiser, of the South Side, and James McGlenn, of the South Side.

PALMO BOXES M'TIERNAN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Buck McTiernan, Swissvale's junior-middleweight (if there is such a class) title contender, goes to the post for the second time in as many weeks in a windup bout at the Moose Temple tonight, clashing with Frankie Palmo, of Cincinnati, over the 10-round route.

Palmo has met a lot of tough ones and figures to give McTiernan a hard tussle. Buck had to step along at a merry pace in beating Billy Brent, Hill Negro, at the Moose in his most recent start, and Palmo, on his record, shapes up as an even more serious proposition.

McTiernan has a habit of jamming the Moose for his bouts, the many admirers of his boxing skill and those fans who want to see him taken down a peg or two (every main bout fighter has some of the latter in his home town) turning out to cheer or jeer him. Which is the reason for the smile on the pan of Promoter Apples Meyers the last few days. He says the advance sale has been just gr-rand.

WALTERS IN SEMI

The fans are keen to get their second peek at Jocko Walters, hard-socking Negro middleweight, of Springfield, O., in the semi-final. He showed a lot of stuff in knocking out Al Becker, of Sheraden, in the downtown arena a few weeks ago, and, after all of the local talent turned him down, the club was able to line up one Billy Thomas, of Cleveland, to oppose him tonight. Tiger Joe Clark, of the South Side, and Harry Fine, of the Hill, are in the second bout, and Joey Bazone, of McKeesport, and Jackie Coogan, of Canton, O., will box the opener, at 8:30.

Between Rounds

The Max Baer-Tommy Loughran fight in Madison Square Garden tonight is apt to prove either or both of two things, one that Loughran, former light-heavyweight champion, is all washed up and can't stand up against a heavy hitter, and, secondly, that Baer really is the overrated youngster he appeared to be in his first two trials in the East, against Ernie Schaaf and Tom Heeney. In other words, both principals are more or less on their mettle.

The Paul Pantaleo-Pierre Charles show scheduled for Philadelphia next Monday night is off due to an injury suffered by Pantaleo. Bud Taylor and Benny Bass meet in the next show at the Arena one week from Monday. Bass, junior-lightweight title will not be at stake.

Dominick Petrone, veteran bantamweight and featherweight, of New York, is coming here next week to make Pittsburgh his headquarters. His name is Petrolio, and he is a cousin of Frank, Andy and Joe Petrolio, of the Schenley Park links. Petrone, who has boxed most of the stars at his weight, would like to meet the winner of the Jackie Rodgers-Johnny Datto return bout.

Datto will arrive in town today to finish his training for his go with Rodgers, at Motor Square Garden, Monday night, and will work out in the Garden gym. Rodgers has been doing a lot of boxing, for he remembers how his fencing skill stood him in good stead after he was floored four times in the second round by Datto in their New Year's Night meeting. He believes he can outbox Datto for the decision and hopes to keep away from or muffle the Filipino's dynamite right.

Bus Hardy, of Beaver Falls, will break into the Garden against Jimmy Reilly, of McKeesport, in the opening bout Monday. He holds a knockout victory over Paul Balint and has boxed Sammy Paris and others of this caliber. Marcus Nole and Tony LaRose, the latter of Cincinnati, both southpaws, are in the eight-round semi-final, and Carl Montebano, of Braddock, and Joe Zemon, of Cleveland, box the opener.

A Golden Gloves amateur tournament will be staged at McKeesport next Wednesday and Thursday evenings instead of the usual pro battles on Thursday.

Paul McGuire, of Canton, O., former manager of Patsy Pirrone, the Italian light-heavyweight, has supplanted the latter in his stable with Rush Heise, of Columbus, same weight, who will appear here soon.

Pittsburgh's next benefit amateur boxing show is scheduled for Tuesday night, February 24, at the Moose Temple. It will be staged to raise funds for the unemployed of the Thirteenth Ward and will be under the auspices of the Homewood-Brushton Boosters' Club and the Thirteenth Ward Regular Republican Organization. Twelve bouts are carded.

The committee in charge and the boxers who engaged in bouts at the Moose Temple Wednesday night for the benefit of Father Cox's fund will be guests of the latter at a gathering in the auditorium of Old St. Patrick's Church next Tuesday evening.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Buck McTiernan vs. Frankie Palmo, 10 rounds, and Jocko Walters vs. Billy Thomas, Harry Fine vs. Tiger Joe Clark, and Jackie Coogan vs. Joey Bazone, 6 rounds each, Moose Temple.

Tommy Loughran vs. Max Baer, Ralph Fiegurello vs. Paul Swiderski and Stanley Poredo vs. Walter Cobb, 10 rounds each; Frankie Carlson vs. Eddie Cerda, 6 rounds, and Bobby Costello vs. Jack Winger, 4 rounds, Madison Square Garden, New York.
Johnny Risko vs. Charley Retziaff, 10 rounds, Detroit.
King Levinsky vs. Jack Gagnon, 10 rounds, Boston.
Bobby Drechter vs. Irish Charley Nelson, 10 rounds, Brooklyn.
Emory Cabana vs. Young Firpo, 10 rounds; Al Mason vs. Leo Lafferty, 8 rounds, and Herb Brandon vs. Leo Searles, Pete Pantaleo vs. Eddie Cool and Joe Lynn vs. Sam Huey, 6 rounds each, Philadelphia.

SHAMROCK TILT IS POSTPONED

By TOM BIRKS.

The Morgan-Cleveland Shamrock game, scheduled for Sunday, has been postponed until a week from Sunday, Manager Mangus, of the local club, receiving a telegram from the National secretary to that effect.

Why the postponement has been granted was not stated in the telegram, but it gives Morgan a good chance to show why the Shamrocks should be brought back to Pittsburgh.

On Sunday, the semi-final round of the West Penn Cup will be staged at the Bridgeville Speedway. Dunlevy and Cecil will be the contenders, fighting to meet Bridgeville in the final round.

Two games will be played in the Central League tomorow afternoon. Crafton goes to Mesta and Pierpoint hooks up with Pittsburgh Rovers at Leslie Park.

Much depends upon the outcome of the Rovers-Pierpoint tilt. The Ekequist aggregation needs a win to tie Clan Douglas for the leadership.

No games are to be played in the Panhandle loop, but two are carded in the Mon-Yough. Gallatin, league leader, goes to Elizabeth and Mather hooks up with Fitz-Henry on the latter's grounds.

British Accept U. S. Golf Challenge

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The British Ladies' Golf Union, governing body for the British Isles, today announced acceptance of a challenge from the United States for an international women's team match in 1932. The match will be played in England.

BRAVES' PILOT HEADS SOUTH NEXT WEEK

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Manager William B. McKechnie of the Boston Braves will sound one of the first springtime notes of the year one week from Monday when the Wilkinsburg athlete, accompanied by his happy family, will head for Florida.

McKechnie is back from Boston whither he went to complete training details. With Mrs. McKechnie, William, Jr., Beatrice and Little Jimmy, the Braves' pilot will make a leisurely automobile trip to St. Petersburg, springtime home of the Boston club. Bill expects to be on the grounds when the athletes begin to arrive.

LEHENY SIGNED

One of the last things to claim McKechnie's attention before departing for camp was the signing of Pitcher Regis F. Leheny, clever lefthander who resides in Oakland. This bit of business was put over yesterday. Skipper Bill will leave no stone unturned in his efforts to develop this young lefthander. The Braves' boss will give the native son every chance to become a regular member of the Boston aggregation.

Manager Jewel Ens, of the Pirates, is due to reach Pittsburgh some time next week, preparatory to the big jumpoff of the Pirates. Ens and his family have been spending the winter months at West Palm Beach, Fla.

FEW HOLDOUTS

The vanguard of Buccos is scheduled to leave Pittsburgh one week from next Thursday. Ens will be in charge of this squad. Six days later, the second platoon will leave for Paso Robles with Scout Bill Hinchman as conducting officer.

Any "holdout" situation that exists in the camp of the Pirates is known only to the officials of the club and the players who might thus be involved. However, the local officials do not consider an athlete a holdout unless he refuses to sign the papers in time to report when ordered.

It is felt, nevertheless, that the club may have a few players who so far have refused to sign at the figures offered.

CANFIELD FIVE, I. K. S. CLASH

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Canfield (O.) Olympics, one of the strongest independent clubs in the Buckeye state, invade the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House tonight to meet Ziggy Kahn's fast-stepping passers in the feature attraction on the local basketball schedule.

The Ohioans boast an enviable basketball record this season, having beaten the strongest quintets in their section of the state. They also made an exceptionally good showing against the Toledo Red Men, of the American Professional League, a team composed mainly of former members of the Original New York Celtics who represented Cleveland in the American League last winter.

Two games will be played in the West Penn League tonight, St. Michael's opposing Penn Five at Sharpsburg High School, while the Knickerbockers are the attraction of the North Side Bucks.

WAYNESBURG.—The tri-state collegiate wrestling season will be resumed here this evening when the mat teams representing Waynesburg and Thiel colleges meet.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Edgar T. Appleby, of New York, world amateur 18.2 balkline billiards champion, won the first block of his title match with M. C. Wallgren, of Everett, Wash., at the Amateur Billiard Club last night, 300 to 180. Two more blocks of 300 points each will be played.

PINEHURST.—Pittsburgh golfers were in the thick of three links contests here yesterday. T. S. Jamison, of Greensburg, lost a Tin Whistle play-off to Dr. M. W. Marr, of Oakmont, and Mrs. G. A. Magoon lost the third division final of the annual St. Valentine's tournament for women to Mrs. Marr by 4 and 3. Mrs. William C. Fownes, Jr., of Oakmont, took second in the Silver Pails selected 12-holes contest with 38-11—47.

HARLINGEN, Tex.—(AP.)—Al Espinosa, Chicago, and Craig Wood, New Jersey, with a 30-35 on a 72-par course, had the best score in a best ball play preliminary to an open golf tournament which will begin here tomorrow.

MIAMI.—(AP.)—Johnny Watson, South Bend, Ind., who shared medal honors in a professional match play golf tournament with Ky Laffoon, Kansas City, followed the Missourian into the ranks of the defeated in the second round yesterday. Watson lost to Massey Miller, Norwich, Conn., 1 up.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, world heavyweight boxing champion, signed a guarantee of $10,000 yesterday for a bout in the New Jersey courts. Joseph Rahl, slightly under 21 years old, a process server of New York, brought suit against Schmeling for $25,000, alleging the fighter threw him down the steps of a New York hotel after he had tried to serve papers in another suit. He cited numerous injuries.

EDGEWATER PARK, Miss.—(AP.)—Johnny Lehman, Western amateur champion, beat Chuck Becka, Chicago district junior champion, 4 and 2, in the semi-finals of the Pan-American tournament yesterday, while Ben Stevenson, of Beverly Club, Chicago, won over C. F. Bowber, also of Chicago, 8 and 7.

PHILADELPHIA.—(AP.)—Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, one of Connie Mack's pitching aces, won another battle yesterday, but it was not on the ball field. Lefty was a defendant in a $100,000 damage suit brought by R. Green Annan, a fire brick salesman, of Cumberland, Md. The jury deliberated less than two hours and brought in a verdict for the defendant.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Although the New York Yankees are not accustomed to announce when their players sign contracts, Secretary Ed Barrow has disclosed that only seven Yanks have not signed. He did not name them.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—Every regular on the Cubs' 1930 roster has signed his 1931 contract, and Manager Rogers Hornsby and Pitcher Fred Blake already are on their way to the training camp at Catalina Island, Cal. President William Veeck said only a few recruits had failed to send in their contracts, and that none was considered a holdout.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—(AP.)—The Charlotte Observer said today Pat Crawford, infielder traded by the Cincinnati Reds to Hollywood, of the Pacific Coast League, had refused to report and may retire from professional baseball.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Frank Moran, the self-styled "Man of Destiny," wasn't hitting pay dirt in Paris. The longer he remained in France the more certain it seemed that he wouldn't get his share of the proceeds of the fight with Jack Johnson.

Billy Gibson

In the end he became incensed at McKetrick and was ready to break with him.

Billy Wellman now was the manager of the old Madison Square Garden. Johnson couldn't come back to the States, or wouldn't, and the fact that Moran had stayed 20 rounds with the great black made Frank an attraction second only to Johnson.

I was Wellman's publicity man. He told me to offer Moran $10,000 for three fights. Moran had broken with McKetrick. He was hanging around Paris waiting for the cat to jump. I figured that Moran could make a lot more than $10,000 for three fights and cabled him to come on over on his own.

He asked me to manage him and I got $10,000 for him in his first famous fight with Jim Coffey. They drew $40,000 in the old Garden, a whale of a gate in those skimpy days.

KNOCKOUT OF COFFEY

It was a real old Irish turnout. Every Celt in New York and the surrounding country who could get away bought a ticket to see Jim pulverize Moran. It was a regular "Throw 'em Down McClusky" gathering, and, as Jim rolled along toward victory in the first round, there came the strangest "C" wail from that Irish crowd that I ever heard. Moran finally nailed Jim with "Old Mary Ann," and the pride of Ireland measured his length on the canvas. What a night!

It was a tremendous victory for Moran. For the first time in his life he was "up in the chips," as they say.

Billy Gibson managed Coffey and was bitterly disappointed when his hard-hitting Irishman went down to defeat. Jim was a near thing to Peter Maher in the way of punching and popularity—a real Irish giant, the hope of every manager since boxing began.

MORAN REPEATS KAYO

Coffey said it was bad luck. He wanted another crack at Moran, and, two months later, a thing almost unheard of, they again packed Madison Square Garden, and, if the Irish population of New York had been all het up with the first struggle, this second meeting of Moran and Coffey had them pie-eyed.

Feeling was tense and might have been worse had not Moran himself been of Irish blood.

Excitement was at fever heat. The crowds all but broke down the doors. Ticket-takers were swamped and carried off their feet. One Irish conductor, on a surface line, came to the back door, and, elbowing his way in, said in a high tenor voice as he handed over six tickets:

"Oi have lost me friends—but they'll be along in a few minutes. Let them in whin they come."

I don't know whether his friends ever did get in, but the tickets were in the count-up just the same.

Moran knocked out Coffey in nine rounds this time, and this victory sent Moran's stock high sky, eventually leading up to the fight with Jess Willard for the title and marking Tex Rickard's bow to a boxing crowd in New York.

Jack Johnson had fought two fights in Paris following the affair with Moran, and had come back this way, landing in Mexico in an effort to close a match with Willard for the title.

WILLARD WINS TITLE

Jack Curley, the late Harry Frazee and Larry Weber, another theatrical man, had made Johnson an offer. The fight was scheduled first for Mexico City, then Las Vegas, where Johnson had fought Fireman Jim Flynn for Curley, and later Havana, Cuba. Willard won the title in 26 rounds and Johnson scooted to Spain.

Jess came back to New York and started off on a barnstorming tour, first in vaudeville, then with his own show and later with a circus, winding up by buying the circus for his very own. Jess, always hungry for every dollar that came his way, didn't even want to share the profits with the circus people, and, when they approached the lean routing locations, they unloaded on Jess the greatest white elephant a champion ever wound up with.

THE POTTAWATOMIE GIANT

Willard never was a popular champion. He didn't seem to like the job he held, although he did like the money. He was a tough hombre to whip, just the same, and the day he took Johnson's title in Havana there wasn't a man in the world who could have coped with him. He was lean, hard as nails and so infernally tall that an ordinary fighter didn't have a chance against him. Remember he was 6 feet, 7 inches tall in his bare feet and you can well imagine any of the six-footers trying to reach his jaw. Besides, he could hit like one of the Pottawatomie mules he had left in the lurch down in Kansas. He began to figure that he was unbeatable, and, when they get that notion in their heads, they don't take very good care of themselves.

There had been no thought of pairing Moran with Willard. It didn't seem like a good match, although Moran would have tackled the Rock of Gibraltar. He always had plenty of moxie. You can't take that away from him. We didn't realize how close we were getting to big money. There was Rickard. He was on the way home.

STOCK MARKET LIST STAGES RECOVERY

Gains of 1 and 2 Points Numerous as Bulls Push Some of Specialties Up

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP.)—Bears were quickly discouraged with the stock market's lack of responsiveness, and share prices recovered today as they bought back the stock sold short.

Professional bullish activity was resumed in some of the specialties, and advances of a point or two were numerous. Important buying failed to appear as yesterday's decline failed to attract any selling of consequence but a few sensitive issues displayed considerable buoyancy. The bond market made further upward progress, but the fact that new offerings this week were only $21,325,000, or about one-tenth the volume of the previous week, reflected the paralyzing influence of the recent resettlement created by the soldiers' bonus controversy.

The list appeared to be governed largely by internal conditions, for new developments were not of an impelling character. The further reduction in brokers' loans, while amounting to only $18,000,000, was of course a good omen, as indicating no letup in the strengthening of fundamental market conditions. This makes the eighteenth decline in 19 weeks, in which period the sum of $1,506,000,000 has been lopped off the total leaving only $1,716,000,000 in this category of loans, which is approximately the level of November, 1924, when the 1924-1929 bull market was but a few months old. In view of the huge increase in the volume of listed securities since 1924, the current level of loans indicates a condition of deflation much more thorough than then existed.

Report that one of the largest French banks was planning participation in a loan to Germany was regarded in Wall street as highly constructive for France has for some time been planning the development of an international capital market in Paris as a means of utilizing her excessive store of gold and alleviating the ill effects of this concentration of monetary metal. International bankers, of course, hope to see Wall street resume its activity as a leading world capital market but last autumn's collapse of foreign bond prices has made investors wary.

In the meantime the glutting of the money market continues. Despite the month-end credit and currency requirements, the Federal Reserve was able to withdraw a little of its outstanding credit in the past week. Bankers' acceptance rates were cut ⅛ of 1 per cent again today, making reduction of ⅝ of 1 per cent since the first of the year, and recording new lows in the history of the dollar acceptance market. For short maturities the new rates are 1⅜-1¼ per cent. Other credit rates were unchanged.

MANAGEMENT CHALLENEGED BY SLUMP

Panic of Plenty Termed Stupid Condition Caused By Improper Planning

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The continuance of subnormal business constitutes a challenge to management in the large.

This extraordinary depression, which has been characterized as a panic of plenty, is paradoxical. Hard times spring from no penury in the part of nature. Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank, called it a stupid depression because there is a surfeit not a shortage of the commodities that folks desire.

Mr. Rukeyser.

Putting the job of correcting existing maladjustments squarely up to management, William J. Graham, president of the American Management Association pointed out:

"Successful management of business and of commerce, not now organizing ahead with reference to a distribution system that will keep all employables at work for reasonable hours, under reasonable conditions, may yet be challenged by the public to do just that.

"This brings the changing order of management's responsibilities to this public relations apex. That it must ultimately be the accepted duty of management finally to express its public relations obligations to an exacting public by supplying the public with service and good articles, honestly produced, properly advertised, and made known to be as right as right can be; and while doing this to attempt—yes, actually to perform this task—the elimination of business distress such as is now evident in economic maladjustments that must be charged to management when a 'panic of plenty' can exist."

SOME OVERPAID

Society could not overpay a group of individuals who could by wise measures restore economic balance. On the other hand, $100,000 a year men, who drift hopelessly with the tides, appear to be distinctly overpaid.

Farming, which is still one of our greatest businesses, seems on the verge of an industrial revolution. The challenge of existing low prices for agricultural staples is quickening the process of reducing production costs.

All too much emphasis in recent years has been laid on artificial schemes to defeat the law of supply and demand for the purpose of boosting prices.

LOANS DECLINE $18,000,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS)—Loans on stock and bonds to brokers and dealers by reporting Federal Reserve member banks in New York City decreased $18,000,000 during the week ended February 4 to a new low record total of $1,716,000,000, it was announced today. This compares with $1,734,000,000 on January 28 and with $3,402,000,000 on February 5, 1930. The high record was $6,804,000,000 on October 2, 1929.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. Grains advanced early today after a waiting start. Relative failure of moisture predictions in drought districts induced wheat buying. Reversal of market position by recent speculative sellers hovered corn. Opening at ⅛ cent off to ¼ up, wheat later scored material gains. Corn started at ¼ decline to ¼ advance and subsequently rose all around.

Chair-Warming Executive Is Out of Date

By B. C. FORBES

CHAIR-WARMING EXECUTIVES are out-of-date.

The old-time manufacturer or other large employer used to sit in state at his own desk usually during personified according audiences to his own couriers and such office visitors as were accounted important enough to enter the august presence. Had any one suggested to such a gentleman that he hustle out after an order there would have been an explosion. A recommendation that he pack a suitcase and do a series of one-night stands here, there, everywhere to stimulate business, sleeping each night in a Pullman would have been regarded as an insult to proprietorial dignity.

Mr. Forbes

That type of business head is rapidly becoming extinct.

THE MOST MODERN of chief executives not only make it their business to spend weeks at a time hurrying from point to point in the field along the firing line, but they take with them such co-executives as stand to benefit most from extensive first-hand contact not only with company representatives, salesmen, etc., but with customers and consumers.

For example, the president of the largest food company in the world, Colby M. Chester, Jr., has just returned from such a trip, on which he was accompanied by Vice President Francis, in charge of sales, and Vice President Ralph Starr Butler, in charge of advertising. Mr. Chester says he thus learned more in a few weeks than he could possibly have learned in a year sitting in his New York office.

The itinerary of these General Foods Corporation officials included a score of major cities, among them Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Memphis, Atlanta, Richmond.

Shortly New England and Middle Atlantic states, as well as the main parts of Canada and also the Pacific Coast will be covered.

ASKED ABOUT his experiences, Mr. Chester said to me:

"It is most refreshing to visit cities where the people act as if they were genuinely glad to see you, and as if they were not impatient, as is so often the case in New York, to get rid of you. Almost everywhere we found merchants, bankers, manufacturers and other business men most willing to give us information about their local conditions and to furnish us with any facts we desired. We took occasion sometimes to sound out consumers as to whether they used any of our products and, if so, how they liked them and whether they could give us any helpful suggestions.

"There is a lot you can't learn about your business and how your goods are regarded, by confining yourself to your office or making occasional visits to your own factories. The outside viewpoint often is illuminating, especially when you can get opinions without revealing your identity."

Asked how he found general conditions, Mr. Chester said:

"The contacts we made convinced us that the bottom of the depression was reached in December. Nothing has developed to change that conviction. We don't know just when the upswing will come, but certainly there will be no further recession.

"New York's mental attitude has been the worst in the country. In Philadelphia and Chicago business people are more active and more confident. In Denver the feeling is fine. Detroit, of course, felt severely the curtailment of payrolls last fall. Conditions in the drought region naturally are far from cheerful.

"On the whole, however, we have returned confident that the trend from now on will be at least moderately upward."

THIS INCIDENT was printed the other day about President James A. Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation. A telephone call to his office requested that a man be sent to an architect's office regarding an order for steel. Mr. Farrell himself went and was told that the order was for only 20 tons. As Mr. Farrell was booking it graciously, the architect asked who the salesman was. On learning that it was the president of the steel corporation whose time had been taken up with such a puny order, the architect apologized. Mr. Farrell replied that no apology was necessary and added:

"If you know where an order for 10 tons more might be booked up in the Bronx, I'll get into the subway and go after it."

Later the architect visited Mr. Farrell at his office and gave him an order for thousands of tons for a big steel structure.

MOST BUSINESS is found these days by going out and seeking it.

French Participate In Loan to Germany

PARIS, Feb. 6 (AP).—Reports that the Banque de Paris et Pays Bas, one of the most powerful financial institutions in France, had decided to participate in a loan of $32,000,000 to the German government were given credence in usually reliable quarters.

In these sources it was said the French government virtually had given its assent to such participation, which was hailed in some circles as a definite proof of improved financial relations between France and her former enemies.

According to reports, the loan will be underwritten in the United States by Lee Higginson & Co., in France by the Banque de Paris et Pays Bas, and in Holland by the Mendelssohn banking firm. The French collaboration, it was said, will be in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

Connie Calls Duke When She Sees Prowler

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid. While out riding with Connie, Duke says she is a new thrill in his life. When he kisses her she is powerless to resist.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LIII

For a moment Connie stood breathless and poised in the darkness of her room, straining her ears to catch any faint traces of wisps of sound from outside. Someone, definitely, was there.

Whether she actually heard, or perchance sensed a movement was not clear. Her thoughts, security, went to Duke Garson; if she could but communicate with him, now and surreptitiously, she would feel an immense safety.

Jim Tracy, as far as any assistance went, was totally out of her mind. Only Garson, of all under the roof, could possibly cope with a prowler; the uncanny conviction that evil was astir in the house grew swiftly in her consciousness. A burglar, a thief, with cautious footsteps. . .

Sees Fleeing Form

Her own movements were silent and ghastly. With a clutching in her breast she glided to her door and put her hand on the knob. Despite her care, there was a faint grating sound against the stillness. Once more, rapidly, came a thin swishing from outside. Involuntarily and with a sudden recklessness Connie flung open her door and thrust her head out. The light in the hall was dim; her first glance showed nothing and she turned her head the other way—to the left—just in time to see disappearing in the angle of the wall some form so fleetingly glimpsed that it was no more than a mere flicker of vision.

The sudden, violent beating of her heart checked, stifled her breathing; sharp impatience amounting to anger swept over her with a hot, vigorous tide. The mystery stunned her resentment, blotted out in one burst of provoked daring the last of her hesitation. Stepping out into the hall, her first thought was to knock on Garson's door; yet curiosity was stronger. Moving quickly, she advanced to the spot where the vague form had disappeared. Nothingness confronted her. No one was there.

Whoever disappeared had two choices: without being seen where Connie originally stood, he could have slipped down to the main staircase to the top where there were several unfurnished rooms and the two rooms occupied separately by Mary Smith, the maid, and Mrs. Lahey, the cook. This upward climb, however, would have necessitated the opening of a door at the top of the flight. Connie heard no such sound.

Standing perfectly still, Connie bit her lower lip and frowned; no, her imagination had not deceived her—she had actually glimpsed a skulking figure.

If help were to be had and a solution no time could be lost. Swiftly retracing her steps, she went back down the hall and stopped in front of Garson's door. If possible, she wanted to arouse him without waking anyone else. If she rapped, in the stillness of the night, the sound, she feared, would reach the others sleeping. A contempt for convention, for mock modesty, under circumstances such as these, gave her the determination to try his door. It was unlocked. For the fraction of a second she hesitated and then, resolutely, opened it narrowly and slipped inside, closing it softly behind her. In this inner darkness she saw only the dim, bulking lines of the room's furnishings. In the midst of the darkness her voice reached out in a whisper:

"Duke!"

Tells Garson

Immediately there was a movement, an alert springing up of a responsive consciousness, instinctively guarded.

"Yes—what is it?"

She moved a step nearer, and kept her voice low—

"Someone has been slipping about in the hall. I got up and saw a flash of someone disappearing at the landing. I thought maybe it was a robber."

"Wait!"

He moved swiftly, found his bathrobe and slippers; "I'll have a look," he whispered. "You better go back into your room and wait."

A terrifying thought came to her. "But if it's a burglar he might shoot you."

Garson opened the door and stepped out into the hall with Connie close behind him. Here they could speak more freely.

"I don't expect to get shot," he told her. "Tell me, first, what you heard and saw and then you'd better get out of sight."

Briefly, she gave him the information.

"I went down the other end of the hall but whoever it was, wasn't in sight," she added.

The informality of his attire, at the moment, did not appear unusual; indeed, she was so tensely stirred that she was not aware at all of anything unusual in her own appearance or his.

"Maybe we'd better get Jim up," she suggested, "in case we should need help—"

"We'll wait until we see if we need Jim first," Garson assured her. "Here's your door, in with you."

But she refused to go inside. "I want to go along with you," she declared, stubbornly.

"All right—just down the hall then," he agreed. "If you went alone before I suppose it's safe enough now."

She was beside him and, without realizing, clinging to his arm.

DAILY TRUE STORY Pretty Good Girl

"Dizzy blonde you had on the string at the El Dorindo last night, Larkin," Larkin Holmes' father glanced across the table at his brother with a troubled expression.

Larkin shot a resentful look at his Uncle Horace and wished he would mind his own business.

"Thought you were up at the camp, Larkin," his father said.

Larkin flushed. He was only 22, but he held himself to be quite a man-of-the-world, or at least quite a budding man-about-town, and resented anything that hinted at criticism of his goings and comings.

"Thad and I came down early," Larkin explained. He turned to his uncle. "What the devil were you doing at the El Dorindo at that hour?" he asked. Instantly he was sorry to have mentioned the hour, because he did not arrive at that night club until around 2 in the morning.

"Dropped in to see King about renewing his leases."

Larkin remembered then that the building housing this night club was one of many that his father and his uncle owned jointly.

"Who was she, Larkin—one of our crowd?" his father asked, trying to make it appear as though he were simply making light conversation.

"Nothing so stiff-necked as our crowd," the boy answered, resentfully.

"I see."

His father attempted to smile as though it were merely amusing. As a matter of fact, Mr. Holmes was greatly worried about his son. There had been no mother for 10 years. He had done his best, but he felt the boy had grown rather wild in spite of all he could do.

For a Holmes to go wild was almost beyond belief. The Holmeses had been a steady-going and upright family for many generations.

"Rather footloose, as it were, eh, son?"

"What's all the fuss about, and the cross-examination?"

Larkin spoke resentfully.

Discuss Actress

"It is customary, Larkin," his uncle said, mildly, "to — er — joke a young friend when he is seen out with some new beauty."

"The young lady is a Miss Dottle."

"Dottle?" said Uncle Horace, as if trying to place the name.

"Dottle!" Larkin's father exclaimed, firmly. "Miss Dorothy Dottle."

"Dorothy, eh? Dot Dottle—euphonious at least."

"She is a professional girl," Larkin informed them.

"Ahem—er—did you say she was a—er—profesional?"

Larkin looked at his father and grinned.

"Professional was the word, sir. Miss Dottle is on the stage."

The subject was dropped then. After Larkin had departed, and his father and uncle had gone to the library for coffee, cognac and cigars, the boy's father looked inquiringly at his brother.

"Don't know much about her, Edward," Larkin's uncle said. "I asked King. He said she was just one of the chorus girls from one of the shows. Quite popular, from what King said—seems to be possessed of a rather wide acquaintance."

"I don't like it, Horace."

"Larkin is 22. If I remember, at that age we now and then, to quote Byron, 'basked in the beam of a dark rolling eye'—what?"

"If she is a—did you say 'dizzy' blonde?"

Horace nodded.

"Then she has dark rolling eye."

"Color doesn't matter—girls' eyes will roll."

"I had hoped, Edward, that in say another year or so, Larkin and Helen would make a match of it."

"Hope for it, Horace? I greatly desire it."

Helen Jervaise was the ward of Horace Holmes, the daughter of a dear friend of both of them.

Starts Investigation

Helen came down for the Easter holidays.

"It will be pleasant for you to take Helen about," Larkin's father said to him. "She is a little beauty, and a little lady as you well know."

"Helen is all right, sir," Larkin agreed, "but she's like a sister to me—a chap doesn't have quite so much fun with a sister tagging about—"

"Demmit, sir, Miss Helen is no sister, no relative, and as for tagging about—you should be proud to have her affection."

Mr. Holmes started a few inquiries, with the aid of a most capable and discreet investigator he had used occasionally in various matters.

The reports he got concerning Miss Dot Dottle were not reassuring. Especially alarming were the reports as to the frequency with which young Larkin Holmes devoted his time to the vivid young blonde.

Mr. Holmes went into executive session over it.

"Wild oats," his troubled uncle suggested.

"One doesn't scatter wild oats in such a foolish open fashion," Larkin's father reminded him.

"If we protest too much he will be stubborn and it may force him into a terrible mesalliance, be sure of that."

"And if he takes a really deep fancy to this girl he may consider it to be love. In such case, even if we made it clear to him about the character of the girl he would be quixotic enough to marry her," the boy's father said.

"Helen will be down soon, perhaps her charms will help. There will be many receptions and the like; it may make him see the difference between a young lady of our crowd and of—well, of girls named Bottle or Pottle."

"The name," said Larkin's father, with a shudder, "is Dottle, as she uses it. Her real name is Schraddle."

At this, even Uncle Horace shuddered.

Helen came down. Larkin was extremely nice to her, he was the sort who would be, just naturally, but he begged off from a number of nice receptions, and got home around daylight from some night club or other where Dotty Dottle had lavished her charms on him.

Things were rather desperate.

Poor Helen was troubled. She especially wanted to go to the Grayerson reception and ball and Larkin had practically said he couldn't make it.

Then, at nine o'clock breakfast, Larkin came down. Helen wasn't down.

Uncle Horace looked steadily at Munson, the butler. If one watched closely, one might have seen Munson's left eyelid flicker slightly, indicating that he understood what he was to do.

"Look here," Uncle Horace said, after the fruit, and Munson had brought Larkin his egg in the egg cup, "tell us honestly, is this Miss Dottie Dottle a good girl?"

"Why—er—of course—"

"Larkin," said his father, kindly, "you are a Holmes. We are asking you a serious question. Answer it as a Holmes would answer."

Larkin turned red. He tapped the egg shell in the cup and started to remove it. He added salt and pepper.

Agrees With Father

"Why—er—she is a pretty good girl," he said, looking first his father and then his uncle in the eye.

He took a mouthful of the egg and made a horrible face.

"That egg it's awful," he said, indignantly.

"Oh, now it isn't, Larkin, it's not perhaps a perfectly good egg, but it is a pretty good egg—well, say about the same as this Dottle girl is, as you admit, just a pretty good girl."

Larkin Holmes stared at the egg and shoved it away.

"You win," he said; "from now on my eggs and my lady friends must be strictly good—"

Helen came down then.

Larkin jumped up.

"Helen, dear, get some sleep today, and select your best frock, we are going to the Grayersons' tonight," he said.

Mr. Holmes and Uncle Horace left them at the table and went out to the library, where they grinned and shook hands.

That's Telling It to Them, Mister Woeltz. One Gathers That Lem Is Slightly Provoked

(From the Wabeno, Wis., Advertiser)

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Certain parties have called to my attention that a certain skunk is and has been spreading propaganda to this effect:

That I am going to use my property and rent the same for a roadhouse.

I wish to inform these dirty low born skunks that I have lived a clean and open life. And further, I am now feeble-minded. Any man that will spread a rumor of this nature is a dirty low born skunk. I wish to inform these skunks that if they are not men enough to face the music as a man should, that they had better hole up some place like a barking dog.

I am under the impression that any man who will make such statements is a cur dog, much less a human being. These skunks living in a human hide have put their finger in the pie and are unable to pull out the plum. I am going to start immediate action in our courts for defamation of character. LEM WOELTZ.

Doctoring of Textbooks

Solid Basis Exists for Gov. Pinchot's Suspicion that Utilities May Tamper With Teaching.

Gov. Pinchot had ample justification for his warning to the State School Directors' Association to be on guard against doctoring of textbooks by the public utilities. His suspicion that the Power Trust may tamper with the teaching in the public schools is no chimera, but rests on a solid basis.

Testimony given before the Federal Trade Commission three years ago proved conclusively that the Power Trust keeps a watchful eye on what is taught the school children of Pennsylvania and other states.

R. O. Hughes, a teacher at Peabody High School, wrote a textbook on "Community Civics," in which he said that while it is an economic crime to let water power go to waste, "it is also a crime to permit it to be used by private corporations to add riches to their own treasury and to lock up this energy so that the Nation cannot profit from the streams which belong to all the people."

The Power Trust decided this could not but "prejudice the mind of the student against corporations, natural monopolies and utilities in general." It accordingly had the book blacklisted in some parts of the country. The Power Trust's chief of propaganda in Pennsylvania, J. S. S. Richardson, director of the Pennsylvania Committee on Public Service Information, went to Harrisburg with a complaint against Prof. Hughes' book, and also wrote to J. H. Shearer, an Altoona utility executive, to suggest concerted action by all the public utilities companies of Pennsylvania to influence the schools.

All this, and much more of a similar nature, is a matter of record.

And there is no evidence that the Power Trust has amended its ways.

Paving Improvements

Innovations Discussed at Convention Here Are of Interest To Motorists and Taxpayers.

Innovations in highway construction, discussed at the convention here of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' Association, are of more than technical interest.

One speaker told of experiments in the use of a metal base, which seemed to make possible a lower maintenance cost. Another told of paving streets at an exceptionally low cost by turning over and relaying old brick pavement.

So much of the state and municipal revenue goes into paving, and the effect of good or bad paving is felt so widely that this subject is of concern to every motorist and taxpayer—and that includes nearly everybody.

A Deceptive Path

Life Story Explains How Alma Rubens Found Thistles And Poisonous Weeds Instead of Primroses.

The primrose path—what an alluring phrase.

All moonlight and roses, pearls and diamonds, champagne and truffles, mad love and thrilling romance.

But when you get close enough to the primrose path to see it as it really is, the primroses turn to rag weed and nettles.

The moonlight is apt to turn out to come from a glaring electric light filtered through a globe, not overly clean.

The diamonds and pearls can be bought at the bargain counter and the champagne turns out to be synthetic gin and bootleg whisky.

The truffles are not truffles at all, but just a rather frayed ham sandwich.

The mad love and thrilling romance—oh, they're as cheap as the sham diamonds, and the mock pearls, and as dangerous and bitterly cruel as the synthetic gin and the bootleg whisky.

Read Alma Rubens' story of the primrose path and see how the poor girl looked for the primroses and found nothing but thistles and ill-smelling poisonous weeds.

Taking Undue Advantage

"Lame Duck" Congressman Put Back on Public Payroll To Help Arrange Washington Birthday Program.

Next year the government and people of the United States will lead the family of free nations in a world-wide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

General supervision of the national program of arrangements for the proper observance of this epochal event has been given to the George Washington Bi-Centennial Commission under the joint directorate of the Honorable Sol Bloom, representative in Congress from New York, and Col. Ulysses S. Grant III, United States Army.

Under pressure of many other duties Col. Grant recently resigned as associated director. Pending the filling of this vacancy the direction of arrangements devolved upon Congressman Bloom.

Now it is announced that Congressman Cramton, of Michigan, is to be appointed as Col. Grant's successor at a salary of $10,000 a year.

Congressman Bloom and Col. Grant accepted no salary for their services.

Doubtless the reason why a salary is deemed essential for Col. Grant's successor is to be found in the fact that Mr. Cramton will be without a job after the fourth of next March. He was defeated for re-election last November. He is a "lame duck" member for whom the Republican administration seems to be using the money of the Bi-Centennial Commission to make a place.

In view of the fact that the titular leader of the Republican Party is chairman of this commission and the chairman of the Republican National Committee is vice chairman and seven other Republicans are members, the appointment of a Republican "lame duck" to a $10,000 directorship is, to say the least, unseemly.

Either Col. Grant ought to be relieved of other and less important duties and restored as associate-director, or the program, which he and Congressman Bloom have so effectively developed, ought to be placed in charge of Mr. Bloom.

In any event the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Washington should not be taken advantage of by Republican politicians to put back on the public payroll a representative who was so recently expelled by the people of his own district.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Smothering Wives

Before marriage a girl "mothers" a man by making him comfortable, catering to his moods, sympathizing with him, admirings his talents, and offering to keep his neckties pressed.

* * *

After marriage she "smothers" him by censoring his food, opening his letters, apologizing for his pet habits, keeping tabs on his time and selecting his neckties.

It is SO different! As different as Saturday night and Monday morning!

Far more marital love is killed by suffocation than ever died from starvation!

Prying, picking, arguing and following him around with advice, a questionnaffe and a hot water bottle never made any man grateful for a woman's devotion. Either it hardens him so that he doesn't notice that she is there, or it tortures him until he would cheerfully turn and murder her if he did not fear the publicity.

* * *

He may "give in" to you, but every time you win a little point over him you lose a lot of his love.

* * *

Many a husband spends his whole life as a "prisoner at the bar" trying to "explain himself."

It takes all the joy out of everything for a man to feel that every time he changes his cuff-links, his diet, his meal-hours or his opinion, he will have to invest a steel-riveted waterproof alibi to "explain" it.

Many a girl has made the fatal mistake of beginning the "smothering" before the wedding and lost the chance at a perfectly good husband by making a man "explain" every time he happened to be 20 minutes late.

After all, if a man is old enough for you to lead him to the altar, he is old enough to know when to wear his rubbers and when to take his cough medicine.

How to keep his hair smooth—and when to change his collar.

Where to lay his cigar-stubs—and at what temperature to take his shower.

What to eat—and when to stop eating.

* * *

It is sweet and unselfish of a woman, of course, to want to oversee a man's whole life. But, after all, a man marries in order to get a cheer-leader, not an overseer!

A NEW LIGHT ON EVOLUTION

By Archibald Henderson

There is a famous law, named for its formulator, Dollo, known as the "law of the irreversibility of evolution." Evolution is said to be irreversible; but it is now believed by scientists that its direction can and does change. Animated discussion among anthropologists is going on.

Indeed it has been suggested instead of man being derived from the anthropoid ape, the precise reverse is the case. Henry Fairfield Osborn, however, has recently invoked Dollo's "law of the irreversibility of evolution" as debarring the whole anthropoid ape group from human ancestry on account of their loss of certain anatomical characters which have been retained by man.

At the same time, it must not be forgotten that Prof. Osborn has recently made an attack on what is known as the "ape-man theory" of evolution.

This position has been misinterpreted by certain groups, notably preachers and journalists, who have leaped to the conclusion that the so-called Darwinian hypothesis of man's origin has been demolished. As a matter of fact, Osborn has frankly stated that he does not ignore the "overwhelming evidence of a remote community of origin between man and the anthropoid apes." The special theory which he combats is that feature of the Lamarck-Darwin hypothesis that man once passed into highly specialized arboreal adaptions attained by the Miocene apes.

Indeed, we have only to compare the so-called diagram illustrating his present theory of the ascent and phylogeny of man, with the family tree of man advanced by Prof. William K. Gregory, to note their essential similarity. Osborn places the point of initial differentiation of man and the anthropoid apes one geologic epic earlier than does Gregory.

It must be clear that Osborn's theory is not any revolutionary overturning of the Darwinian hypothesis of man's origin. The new version of the Lamarck-Darwin theory of man's origin is shared in its main features by Osborn, Prof. Gregory, Sir Arthur Keith and Prof. G. Elliott Smith.

Osborn unequivocally proclaims the strong evidence for an Eocene arboreal stage in our ancestry. He further asserts that in the forest remain all the backward, conservative types, while on the plateaus and uplands are found the alert, progressive, forward-looking types.

Much evidence continues to point strongly to the conclusion, as stated by Gregory, that although man may have been a plateau-living biped for millions of years, his ancestry eventually merges with that of the conservative, forest-living, originally arboreal anthropoids.

One point of sharp difference occurs between the theory of Osborn and that of Keith, Gregory, Morton and others. This is in regard to what is known as brachiation or phase of development through the use of the arms. As first used by Keith brachiation means that method of progression in the trees in which the suspension grasp is employed by the arms, while the backbone is in general vertical to the plane of progression.

Keith and others regard brachiation, to a moderate extent, as an indispensable prerequisite for the assumption of erect bipedal posture on the ground. Osborn admits the existence of a common ancestral stock from which man and the anthropoid ape are both derived, but eliminates from the human line the "brachiating stage" through which the early anthropoid undoubtedly passed.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Hundreds of men huddle idle in the darkening rain. . .ragged coats. . .ragged eyes—

A dreadful picture. But there's a still more sinister side to the unemployed picture, a side of which, perhaps, you've never thought. Here it is—in a few, snarling lines. Yes, it's a real letter and he's probably telling the truth. You don't believe it? Ask any cop.

ELSIE ROBINSON:

Here is a genuine case for you to concentrate on. I am now 21 years old and well educated, but cannot get a job. I have been unemployed for over a year and regret to inform you that during the last three months I have had to take up a life of crime.

I am now in a position where I am not sure that, were prosperity to return, I would be even interested in the jobs I could get. I have found that, by working a few hours in a month, I can make more money than I could if I were working honestly. However, I know that the law of averages is decidedly against me, and, in time, I will be apprehended. I would greatly appreciate anything you could put in your column for me and thousands of others of my kind who are forced to do this because of the times.

Very truly yours,
YOUNG FATALIST.

Oh, yes? And I suppose you think, son, that because I'm a woman, I'm going to snivel over your sad plight, or because I'm a journalist I'm going to shriek with alarm. Don't fool yourself. I shall do neither. Sorry because you haven't a job? I'm sorry for anyone who hasn't a job. But believe that you've "had to do this because of the times?" Not for a second!

You haven't turned criminal because you can't get a job. You've turned criminal because it was easier than staying straight. Yes, I know exactly how hard it is to stay straight. I know too, its ghastliest detail. It means body and soul raveling into rags. It means such desperation that you lose track of time and the days ooze together into a meaningless blur. It means gagging at the smell of food, and going dizzy with hate at the sight of the rich and warm.

That's what staying straight through months of unemployment means. How do I know? Because I've been there. And a century of jobs won't erase that memory. It won't erase that memory, either, for the unemployed men and women who are going through the agony of this winter.

But they're staying straight in spite of that. They're hungry and cold and homeless and hopeless—millions of them, but they're still keeping faith with themselves. That's the stuff they're made of. And you're quitting. You who are still young and healthy, educated and foot-free. You're quitting. Well—quit kid, if that's your measure. If that's what you want to do with the power of your youth and the pride of your manhood—quit. But at least be a sport about it. Don't alibi! Don't pull a cry-baby mouth! You're not being forced into a life of crime, and you know you're not. You're turning crook because you haven't the courage to stay straight. Any piker can pull a trigger—but it takes a regular man to face days of hell on an empty stomach.

And it's because of them that you, and others who think like you, are being answered. Don't be so brisk in assuming that those other poor chaps are going to follow your example. A few will. But most of them will stay steady, stay steady through something that's harder to face than war or death. Thank God for their courage—and help us to end their misery soon!

Text for Today For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away: But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.—I. Peter, i:24, 25.

Miracles Still Happen

Though We Don't Call Them Miracles.

POPE PIUS XI AT HIS DESK.
Telephone, Dictating Machine and Now Radio Serve His Holiness in Shepherding His Flock.

Millions read with interest last week the exclusive news in this and other Hearst newspapers telling of the radio broadcast to be made on February 12 by his Holiness, Pope Pius XI.

The papal greeting will be carried through the air to all nations of the world. As the Pope speaks several languages, it is expected that he will use each. What this will mean to the vast Catholic congregation in this country and others cannot be overestimated. By the miracle of radio, members of the church will hear the living voice of the pontiff—as clearly as though they had been granted an audience at the Vatican.

What changes the world sees, hardly knowing they are changes!

Who would have foreseen, 30 or 40 years ago, that "the prisoner of the Vatican"—no longer a prisoner—would speak directly to his myriads of subjects in every corner of the earth, and without raising his voice or moving from his study?

Yet we are told that miracles don't happen nowadays!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Thoughts while strolling: The beauty of gray spires on a foggy day. Those Eton collared tads who carry varnished hoops to the park. I can never tell Marion Harris from Frances Williams. Something stimulating about a pile of new luggage.

Will C. Lengel, a Durango (Col.) boy, who made good in the city. Everybody says France is full of war talk. Wonder how much of the Nobel prize money Sinclair Lewis will bring home. Sign: "Backgammon Tuition by Appointment." Over a Broadway grill: "Collegiates barred after midnight."

Wish Elizabeth Arden, Dorothy Gray and Helena Rubenstein would get together and give me a tea some afternoon. With Truly Warner pouring. Somehow you expect Lee Tracey to be cyclonic off stage, too. But he's shy. The new quarter-in-the-slot movies—without ushers.

Sparrows that flock around express wagon horses at feeding time. That no-back-talk manner of buxom Mae West. And her "Diamond Lil" offered more entertainment than most of the Guild things. Those Vanderbilt Fifth avenue butlers who peep from behind curtains at passers-by.

Lots of Social Registerites cannot make "Who's Who." The pleasant Brick Row Book Shop on Fiftieth street. Pink and blue nursery furniture. Those club Casanovas who sidle up to windows where women stop. And comment upon the weather as a prelude to a flirtation.

Nothing intriques me more than eavesdropping on a gentleman who has just picked up a lady. Anyone with cash who doesn't pick up bargains these days is a sucker. A few more weeks and prices will skyrocket. Watch! What became of embroidered texts they put over beds?

I've never seen a cruel dwarf in real life. They are invariably gentle. A tea room named "Lola Montez." There was a vamp! Broadway's evening parade of buffoons and libertines. A blind man sits serenely smiling in his shadowy newspaper hutch. Strange, this wrinkle called life!

The Pennsylvania was the first big terminal to install a radio in its main hall. Lively broadcasts have stimulated speed among the red-caps.

Harlem's seasonal contribution to slang is: "Tight like those!"—a phrase indicative of admiration. When one is "tight like those" he is a person of importance. Then there is the Black Belt's "smitchy-like," an epithet for the petty grafter.

The richest woman in Harlem is fortunate Alelia Walker, who inherited the wealth of a no-kink nostrum. She is the most notable spender and on occasional rounds gives a phrenetic patina to such hot spots as the Cotton Club, Pod's and Jerry's, Tillie's Chicken Place and other sanctuaries of the brown bonton. Aside from social queenship she is the best dressed woman in Licorice lane. Her evening frocks are dazzling and her limousine on auspicious evenings has not only its liveried chauffeur but footman as well.

There is little welcome in Harlem cellars for those who do not partake of native gin. The sober looker-on is regarded as the intruder. With three other non-tipplers as the nucleus of what we hoped would be a merry party, a waiter seemed annoyed we did not order gin with ginger ale. "They're gawkers," we overheard him tell a captain.

* * *

But I believe my flair for annoying the other fellow reached its high in a ticket agency near the Carnival de Venice on the Boulevard des Capucines in Paris. I inquired of the attendant if the opera was on that particular week. Bestowing the most scornful glance I ever beheld, he lifted hands in air and stormed away. Gaining control of his emotions he returned and screamed: "Ze opera is always open. He nevaire close. Nevaire! Nevaire! Jamais!" That was all I wanted to know, and to this day I see no sense of getting so uppity.

I notice men who get efficient service in public contracts are the blustering self-assertive types. My attitude before box office windows and such is cringing. And I'm eternally snubbed. I always leave happy someone didn't reach out and smack me over.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

In Every Life

In every life despite its Dull hours of dragging prose
Some interval of beauty
To singing meter flows,
Some interlude Elysian
Apart from common time
And moving through a universe
Star-lit, serene, sublime!

These seasons are the treasures
That, misers all, men hold
To muse above in twilight moods
When done with youth's bright gold.
In every life they quicken
The spirit's faltering wings
And turn renascent vision
Away from sordid things.

I know this sweet resurgence,
For I have lagniappe, too,
To muse above in twilight moods,
The hours I spent with you!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Do you allow really insignificant things to destroy friendships you have formed?

Can't you look back to occasions when a friendship enjoyed by you for years was broken over a very trivial matter?

Many times you wish you might have retained the good will of those from whom you are now separated by a barrier which grows stronger and stronger each year.

Breaking a friendship is a serious matter.

In the course of a lifetime you do not make many friends for whom you can entertain admiration, great respect and, perhaps, love unsullied by thoughts of personal gain and know it is reciprocated.

The fact that you feel that you have very few true friends may be more or less your own fault. Perhaps you do not curb your actions and words.

There is something wrong with the person who does not win at least a few deep friendships.

First of all, there must be the strong desire and the spirit which is capable of loyalty.

Friendship exacts, and if you are unwilling to do what a strong friendship demands, you should not expect others to become your staunch supporters and admirers.
